

Thieu resigns in bid for peace

SAIGON (AP) — A tearful President Nguyen Van Thieu resigned tonight in an eleventh hour bid for a settlement with Communist-led forces who have driven almost to the gates of Saigon. He bitterly accused the United States of moves that he claimed "led the South Vietnamese people to death."

The Viet Cong had demanded Thieu's ouster as a first step toward talks. But some U.S. experts say that fighting in South Vietnam so favors the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, who have taken three-quarters of the country, it is doubtful they would be willing to negotiate even with Thieu gone.

In Paris, the Viet Cong delegation called for a total U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam and the establishment of a national concord regime in Saigon. The French government urgently called for talks between South Vietnam and the Viet Cong to set up such a regime to settle the political future of the embattled country.

At Clark Air Base in the Philippines, meanwhile, about 1,000 Americans and Vietnamese arrived in the largest such airlift yet from South Vietnam. U.S. officials reportedly bypassed South Vietnamese immigration officials to put many of the Vietnamese aboard. Other Vietnamese evacuees arrived in Guam.

In his televised address, Thieu said, "I told President Nixon and the U.S. Congress that I did not demand an indefinite assistance but only assistance for five years so we can develop our economy."

"I said I was like a newly recovered patient and if I am given enough medicines soon, I will be strong enough. But later the internal affairs of the U.S. prevented the Republic of Vietnam from getting sufficient assistance."

"While the assistance is insufficient and the 300,000 North Vietnamese still in South Vietnam continue to receive tanks and artillery pieces from the Soviet Union and Red China, repair their airfields and establish more infantry divisions, South Vietnam stands under a defensive position, unable to do much, unable to bomb North Vietnam because of the lack of military aid.

"We could not back up our defense lines because we did not have enough helicopters, ammunition, weapons, and we had to retreat, and we were blamed for not being capable of defending the land."

Continuing his bitter attack on the U.S. government, Thieu referring to American troop presence in the South, said:

"Half a million (American) troops and $300 billion can't win over the Communists. The ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) lack of B52s and others means let (South Vietnamese) soldiers die. It is an inhumane act."

Thieu said the United States was the "champion of freedom" and in one year would celebrate its 200th anniversary. He said sarcastically that the $300 million in supplemental aid requested for his government but not yet approved by Congress "was only 10 days of fighting time for U.S. troops here."

He said U.S. aid cuts led to disastrous South Vietnamese retreats and casualties that gave up 50 per cent of South Vietnam's land and half of its 20 million population to the Communist side. Other sources, however, say three-quarters of South Vietnam are under the control of Communist-led forces.

There was speculation that Thieu's successor, Huong, who is in poor health and virtually blind, would resign along with the entire Cabinet and that 61-year-old Tran Van Lam, the president of the Senate, would become president.

Thieu acknowledged in his television address that South Vietnam has lost 50 per cent of its land — other officials put it at 75 per cent — and half of its 20 million population to the Communist side.

Thieu said that in 1973, at the time of the signing of the Paris agreement, he asked the United States to prevent

North Vietnamese aggression if there was another "invasion," to recognize Saigon as the sole legitimate government in the South, and to assure sufficient aid for the South Vietnamese to defend themselves.

He said former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew flew to Saigon then "but guaranteed only the first two points. There was nothing about the third point (aid) and I started to have some doubts."

The first order of business for the new command will be to open negotiations with the Viet Cong for a cease-fire and political talks to end the military debacle that has cost Thieu's government three-fourths of South Vietnam's territory since the first of the year.

The 52-year-old president, who has headed the Saigon regime for 10 years, finally bowed to the inevitable with 10 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong divisions threatening Saigon, radio contact lost with South Vietnamese forces fighting a losing battle at Xuan Loc 40 miles east of Saigon, and the apparently imminent loss of still another province on the coast 35 miles farther east.

Sources said South Vietnamese planes lost contact with the government's 18th Division in Xuan Loc early today. The loss of radio communications usually means that a position has been overrun.

Some sources said there was no indication of a retreat from the devastated city. But others said the battered remnants of the 18th Division were pulling out and heading for Saigon.

The North Vietnamese have already cut the road between Saigon and Xuan Loc, and Xuan Loc is no longer considered strategically vital to the defense of the national capital. But the fierce battle has been a test of the South Vietnamese army's determination to fight again, after the swift loss of three-fourths of the country. The loss of this battle would probably further damage the morale of the army and of the population of Saigon.

North Vietnamese tanks and infantrymen continued their advance down the coast to strike at the heart of Ham Tan, the capital of Binh Tuy province. The airfield three miles northwest of the city was attacked just before dawn.

Field reports said civilians and soldiers began evacuating the city Sunday. It appeared the government units were fighting to gain time for the evacuation rather than to defend the city.

If it falls, Binh Tuy will be the 20th of South Vietnam's 44 provinces lost to the Communists this year.

The blackout on news from Cambodia continued, but newsmen along the Thai-Cambodian border could see Khmer Rouge peacefully occupying the border town of Poipet Sunday. The Thai government announced that it will deliver to the new Cambodian government all military equipment brought into Thailand by fleeing Cambodian troops, including dozens of trucks and armored vehicles, several planes, four patrol boats and hundreds of weapons.

About 1,000 Americans and Vietnamese arrived at Clark Air Base in the Philippines today on the airlift from South Vietnam in the largest evacuation day yet. U.S. officials reportedly bypassed South Vietnamese immigration officials to put many of the Vietnamese aboard.

It was the largest number evacuated in a single day since President Ford ordered nonessential Americans out of Vietnam last Wednesday. U.S. officials said between 2,000 and 2,500 Americans are left in Vietnam.

Twelve of 18 scheduled U.S. Air Force C141 flights arrived at Clark with evacuees. The planes had flown to Saigon with ammunition and other military equipment and returned with passengers.

Arriving Americans said U.S. officials somehow got around South Vietnamese red tape to put Vietnamese, many of them in-laws of Americans, aboard the plane from the U.S. defense attaché compound at Saigon airport.

Americans married to Vietnamese have complained previously that the Saigon government was delaying exit permits for their wives, children and other family members.

A Flying Tiger DC8 landed in Guam with 101 Vietnamese nationals who slipped past the Saigon immigration officials. Flying Tiger said they were employees of the airline and of American Express and would be flown to the United States "where Flying Tiger employees have volunteered to take them in."

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass quickly reported Thieu's resignation and said it was further evidence of the disintegration of the Saigon government.

Two views of occupation

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Crucifixion, beheading, stoning?

Or packed movie houses, open restaurants, and school days as usual?

Those are the two views of life in the 19 provinces of South Vietnam occupied this year by the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese.

An estimated 7 million people have been brought under Communist rule.

Depending on who you talk to, their life is either a blood bath or a love bath.

U.S. Embassy officials are the proponents of the blood bath theory. They are soliciting Western newsmen in Saigon with details of horrendous crimes they claim are committed by the Communist occupation forces.

The South Vietnamese government will say only that it has "some confirming evidence." But young Embassy aides with sheaves of pink copies of reports to Washington tell of the execution of 300 soldiers and policemen on the streets of Ban Me Thuot and the wholesale killing of half-American babies in the coastal city of Nha Trang.

One U.S. official admitted: "Well, honestly, we are making a lot of this issue because it can affect ongoing deliberations of the aid program here. We know some congressmen are already wavering to our side."

The other version of the occupation story is told by representatives of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government in their weekly news conferences at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut air base.

"We will treat humanely, generously and honestly all those who have cooperated with the adversaries provided they stop sabotaging us and stop serving the interests of the Thieu administration," said a Viet Cong spokesman on Saturday.

Some foreign newsmen stationed in Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital, have visited Da Nang, the second largest city in South Vietnam which was given up without a fight three weeks ago.

"The people are enjoying a normal life," Chiaki Hirabayashi of the Japanese Communist party newspaper Akahata reported on Sunday.

He reported most of the gas stations and auto repair shops were open, that five movie houses were operating, and children were going to school.

A reporter for Agence France Presse, the French news agency, sent a similar report from Da Nang.

Many of the Vietnamese who fled from Communist-controlled regions tell the same story.

But U.S. officials insist that a Communist takeover means the methodical, systematic execution of officials and officers who worked for the Saigon government.

"There are a million South Vietnamese on the blood debt list. They are marked for certain death," asserted one American who has spent years documenting this theory.

Reports of policemen and soldiers killed are numerous enough, even though unverified, to indicate that the Communist takeover has not all been a love feast.

Thieu's action won't aid anti-Communists

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

President Nguyen Van Thieu's resignation makes prospects good for negotiations to end the war but far from bright so far as anti-Communist elements in South Vietnam are concerned.

From here on, what takes place in the remaining quarter of what was the Republic of South Vietnam is likely to have a textbook look from a Communist viewpoint; that is, armed force has been used to the extent necessary to bring about a desired political development.

The bitterness of Thieu's remarks about Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the recent events leading up to this climax reflect a realization that at last it's all over. The Communist North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government — PRG — have won.

What lies immediately ahead should require some time for maneuvering. The time will be involved in bringing into being the sort of caretaker-type regime that can hold down the administration in what's left of South Vietnam while the North Vietnamese and PRG prepare to negotiate what they've wanted to negotiate all along.

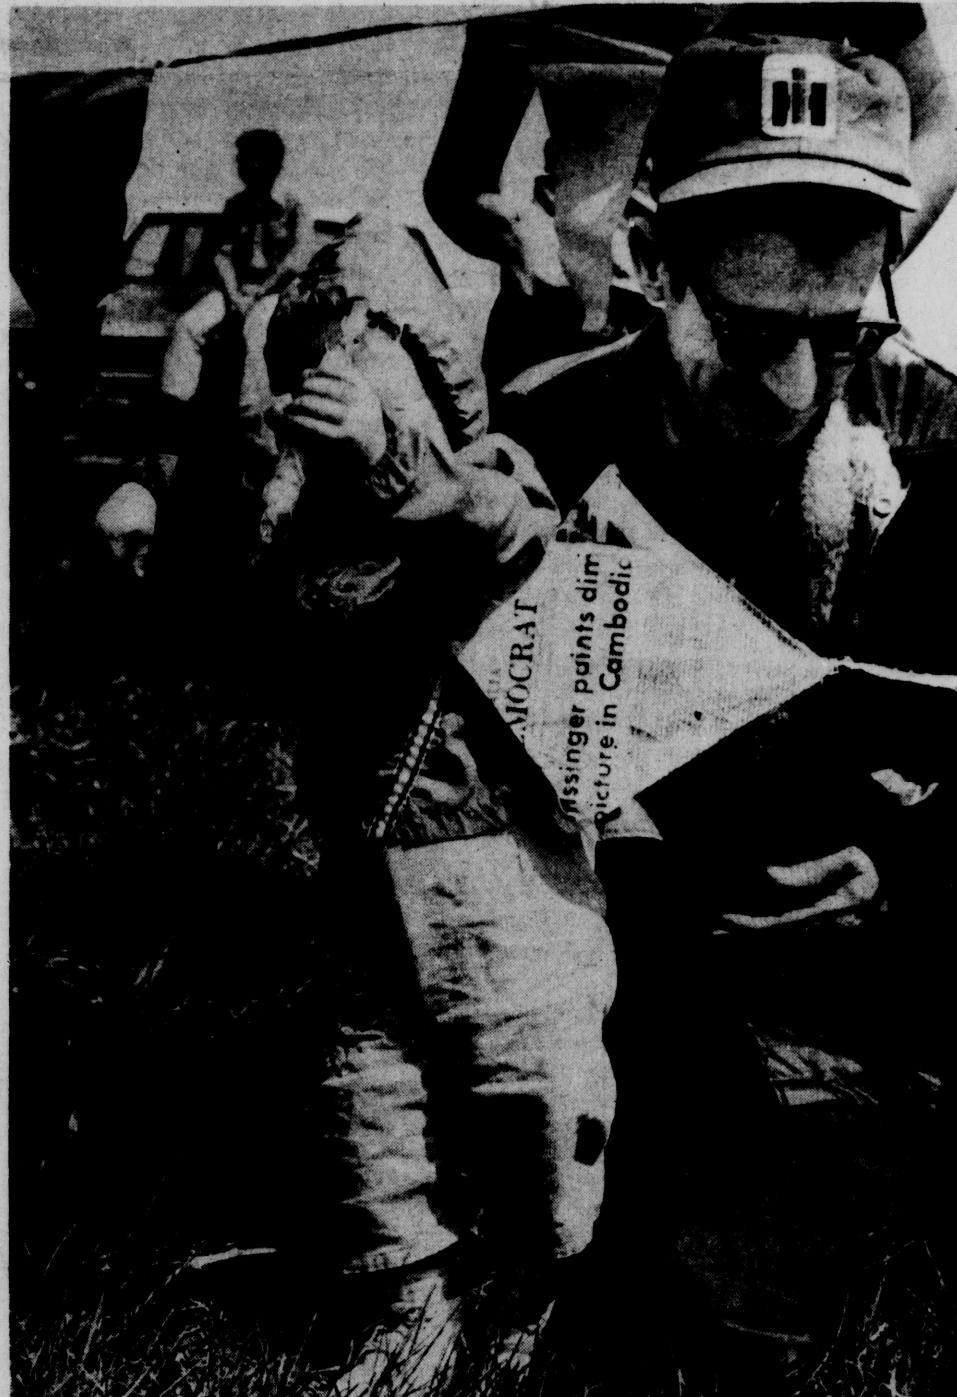

This suggests a likelihood of a game of musical chairs in Saigon until a government is created that meets the demands of the North Vietnamese and the PRG.

The military realities in the remaining quarter of Saigon's realm make it futile to expect that the North Vietnamese Communists and the PRG would accept any administration that bore any trace either of Thieu's regime or American influence.

What the PRG and its sponsor want is an interim regime with the look of "third force" that can be called neutralist. But it will have to be one wherein the PRG will be strongly represented as one of the elements.

The United States at this point appears to have little choice but to watch events take place without having much influence on the outcome.

As military victors, Hanoi and the PRG are clearly holding all the trump cards and in a position to call the shots, strongly backed by the power of the Communist world. Thus they undoubtedly intend to lay down the ground rules for any negotiations that might follow upon the Thieu resignation.

Council to check audit

The recently-completed audit of Cablevision Inc.'s books, is expected to be discussed at tonight's City Council meeting.

Copies of the report, performed by auditor William Woodridge of the accounting firm of Craven, Weishaar, Woodridge and Dooley, were sent Friday to Mayor Jerry Jones and Cablevision manager Lynn Harrison.

The council voted in February to have an audit of Cablevision's financial records undertaken to determine if the company's request for a $1 per month rate increase is justified.

Harrison Monday said the report includes a compilation and consolidation of figures submitted by the company to the council earlier in the year when the rate increase was first requested.

"The report confirms the accounting practices used by Cablevision to obtain the figures which were presented to the council earlier this year," Harrison said. The council in February allowed the firm to retain its $5.90 monthly fee that it had illegally charged since August, 1971, when Cablevision increased the monthly rate by $1 per month without council permission.

Scientists find jaw shrinking

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The human jaw is getting smaller, its chin is receding and its teeth are getting more crooked, says a University of Michigan scientist.

"Our whole facial structure below the eyes is falling to pieces," says Dr. James E. Harris, chairman of the department of orthodontics. "When we see a person with perfect teeth, it's so rare that we take pictures."

Harris has spent the past decade studying the teeth of ancient and present day Nubians, a genetically distinct tribe who lived along the banks of the Nile River for thousands of years.

Harris and his colleagues studied the Nubians, who exhibit the facial features of Caucasians and the bone structure of black Africans, because skeletal remains dating back to 200-1500 A.D. were available.

He began his study to determine why so many people — particularly Americans — suffer from malocclusion, or "bad bite."

The scientists compared the dental and skeletal records of present day Nubians with those of their ancestors.

Harris found that the average Nubian's teeth are not nearly as crooked as the average American's. The reason may be the greater mix of racial groups in America, he said.

"You take people with long heads, round heads, square heads and you throw them all together, you're asking for trouble. You're asking for a harmonious face from a series of genes that are not programmed to produce a harmonious result."

"It's remarkable we look like humans," he said.

Harris said the primary reason humans regularly suffer from malocclusion is their jaw is growing smaller with the teeth getting smaller, too, but at a far slower rate.

Thus, teeth crowd into an undersized jawbone and the consequences are jammed, crooked teeth.

Normally, genetic changes harmful to a species — like too-small jaws — are not reproduced because the species usually does not survive to breed.

But with civilization and softer foods, children with malocclusions have survived and passed on defective genes to their children.

"The crano-facial system is the only system in the body that can completely collapse and you can still reproduce," said Harris.

Earp hired on this date

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) A century ago today, the Wichita City Council hired a tall man with a long name to serve for $2 a day as a policeman under Marshal Mike Meagher.

The man was a 27-year-old Illinois-born adventurer and buffalo hunter named Wyatt Berry Stapp Earp. The Wichita City Council had no way of knowing then it had just launched the career of the Old West's most famous lawman.

At first, Earp's career proceeded without event. Then, on a January night in 1876, Wyatt Earp's pistol roared into action.

Earp's career almost ended right there. When the gun roared, it roared by accident—and Wyatt Earp nearly shot himself.

The Weekly Beacon reported the story on Jan. 12, and misspelled the lawman's name:

"Last Sunday night (Jan. 9) while Policeman Erp was sitting with two or three others in the back room of the Custom House saloon, his revolver slipped from its holster and in falling to the floor the hammer which was resting on the cap, is supposed to have struck the chair, causing a discharge of one of the barrels. The ball passed through his coat, struck the north wall then glanced off and passed out through the ceiling. It was a narrow escape and the occurrence got up a lively stampede from the room. One of the demoralized was under the impression that someone had fired through the window from the outside."

In later years, Earp claimed he often risked death and dodged bullets on the streets of Wichita. But if newspapers of the day are correct, the incident at the Custom House was the closest the famed lawman came to dying with his boots on in Wichita.

A few months after the incident, Earp was fired for beating up Bill Smith, Meagher's opponent in the April 1876 election. Earp went on to Dodge City and five years later, he stepped into the O.K. Corral at Tombstone, Ariz., and immortality as the lawman who outgunned the Clanton gang.

Earp died in 1929 at the age of 80 in bed at his Los Angeles home—with his boots off.

Meeting slated for area CAP

An organization meeting for all persons interested in revitalizing the Sedalia Civil Air Patrol (CAP) squadron will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 1 at the home of Patsy Lane, 2204 East Ninth, it was announced Monday.

A new charter for the group will be presented at the meeting, it was reported.

The announcement came from Pauline S. Woods, CAP Major, who was named to her position April 11. Sedalia, Major Woods noted, had one of the first CAP squadrons. This squadron, she said, "only a few years ago ... was one of the outstanding squadrons in the Wing. Now is the time to make it that way again."

The talents and abilities of teachers, doctors, lawyers, pilots, chaplains, radio operators and many other persons are needed to form a successful CAP squadron, Major Woods stated.

Congress to act on evacuation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, having let President Ford's deadline for Vietnam aid pass, is expected to make key decisions this week on aid to beleaguered South Vietnam and the possible use of U.S. troops in evacuations from that country.

The Senate takes up today a $200 million humanitarian-evacuation package, with a final vote anticipated Tuesday. The House takes up Tuesday a $27 million relief-evacuation plan with fewer restrictions on the use of U.S. armed forces, compared to the Senate bill.

President Ford had asked Congress to approve $722 million in emergency military aid and $250 million in humanitarian aid for South Vietnam by last Saturday. Not only did Congress let the requested deadline pass without acting but it appears unlikely that Ford's request for more military aid will win approval.

Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., chairman of the House Republican Conference, said Sunday that as soon as Ford made the request, "it was quite apparent that that was a lost cause."

Anderson, speaking on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said he opposes any more military assistance to Vietnam and that he does not believe Congress will approve any.

The President's request will be considered before the House Armed Services Committee Tuesday. The House Appropriations Committee, considering separate legislation to provide actual funding for military and humanitarian aid, hears today from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Tuesday from Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, Army staff chief.

The $200 million humanitarian-evacuation bill before the Senate was approved 14 to 3 Friday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It would authorize, subject to the provisions of the 1973 war powers act, the use of U.S. troops to evacuate American citizens from South Vietnam, if necessary for their safety.

It also would permit the same troops to aid in evacuation of endangered South Vietnamese if they were located in the same geographical area and if

Last December, the Missouri Supreme Court ruled in favor of the city and its authority to regulate rates.

Harrison said he would not submit the additional $1 per month rate increase proposal at tonight's council meeting. "If this is brought up, it will be the initiative of the council, not of me," he said.

Harrison did say, however, he will ask the council tonight to approve a 15-year lease renewal agreement calling for the firm to pay a 3 per cent yearly franchise fee rather than the 10 per cent fee it has paid for the past nearly 10 years the original lease has been in effect. This is the first franchise-renewal request to be made by the company, which began operation in Sedalia in 1965.

In other business, two newly-elected councilmen, David Curry, Fourth Ward Democrat, and Jack Kniest, First Ward Republican, will be sworn in tonight by City Clerk Ralph Dedrick. Also to be sworn in will be incumbents Carl Franklin, Third Ward Democrat, and Raymond Bales, Second Ward Democrat, who were re-elected.

A Sedalia girl was listed in "not serious" condition at Bothwell Hospital at noon Monday from injuries she suffered when her bicycle was struck by a car Sunday afternoon.

Rose A. Rowlette, 16, 220 East 26th, was taken to the hospital by ambulance at 12:45 p.m. Sunday following the accident at 26th and Washington.

The Rowlette girl suffered possible back injuries and injuries to her left arm. No summons was issued by police.

French call for negotiations

PARIS (AP) — The French government today urgently called for negotiations between South Vietnam and the Viet Cong to set up a council of national concord to settle the political future of the country.

The statement from the Elysee Palace paid tribute to President Nguyen Van Thieu for stepping aside. A statement by the French government almost two weeks ago had implied that Thieu's departure was necessary to get negotiations started.

France also believes that the search for a political solution should be accompanied by a cease-fire covering all South Vietnam. The statement said the French government was willing to do anything within its power to hasten the application of the 1973 Paris cease-fire agreement.

Earlier, the Viet Cong delegation in Paris repeated its demands for a settlement in South Vietnam: total U.S. withdrawal and the establishment of a "national concord" regime in Saigon.

Clear in South, cloudy in North

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sunny skies covered southern Missouri but there was some cloudiness and a chance of showers in the north today.

Mild weather with a chance of showers about midweek and again near the end of the week was forecast by the National Weather Service.

High temperatures today were expected to range from the 70s in the south to the 60s in the north. Lows tonight were expected to vary from 45 to 55, with highs Tuesday in the 70s.

The outlook for Wednesday through Friday called for a chance of showers Wednesday and Friday, with highs ranging from the mid 60s to the mid 70s.

Highs in Missouri Sunday ranged from 75 at Joplin to 62 at Columbia. Lows ranged from 39 at West Plains and St. Louis to 51 at Joplin.

Members of the Black Sash

Women protest apartheid

By RAY KENNEDY
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Any time the South African government cracks the apartheid whip a group of white women will line a city street holding posters of protest.

Around their shoulders they wear a wide black sash as a symbol of mourning for a constitution they feel is being continually ravaged.

There are 2,000 such women around South Africa, members of an organization called the Black Sash, who campaign against social injustice with one of the most effective weapons in the female armory — silent, nagging criticism.

The movement was formed 20 years ago as the Women's Defense of the Constitution League, a clumsy mouthful which the South African press quickly abbreviated to Black Sash. The name stuck.

Synonymous with Black Sash for the last two decades has been the name Jean Sinclair.

In March, at its annual conference in Cape Town she stepped down at the age of 66 from the presidency after 14 years.

Mrs. Sinclair lives in a large airy home in the wealthy, northern suburbs of Johannesburg.

Her family of five has grown up and left home. Her husband, Robert, a retired accountant, is a chairman of several companies.

To many whites in South Africa, Mrs. Sinclair and her colleagues are mere do-gooders with nothing better to do than play bridge and ease their consciences with ineffectual protest against "the system."

Certainly Mrs. Sinclair has no illusions about the effectiveness of Black Sash's silent poster parades. Nothing the movement has objected to has ever been changed.

"But if the authorities ignore the protests it doesn't mean you shouldn't do them. You've got to be seen doing it," she says.

"One of our main functions is to try to influence the white public but in this affluent and very pleasant kind of society you can't move anybody. But we are not the only failures in this. The opposition political parties haven't succeeded in doing it either."

Black Sash was born when the government introduced a bill in Parliament to deprive South Africa's mulattoes of their 107-year-old right to vote.

The mayor of Johannesburg, South Africa's largest city, which has long been governed by the opposition United Party, called a public meeting to protest the measure.

"Half a dozen of us called on women to march to the meeting and we got 3,000 women in a couple of days," Mrs. Sinclair recalls. "We weren't going to do anything more but so many people rang up to find out what we were going to do next that I organized a meeting at my house. About 50 women came and we drew up a constitution for the Black Sash and decided to organize a petition against the bill. We got 100,000 signatures in 10 days.

"For the whole of that first year we protested against the Senate act and membership grew to 10,000," she said in an interview.

"Our objective was to haunt ministers wherever they went. When they arrived anywhere or left anywhere on official business there would be Black Sash women there."

Men may join Black Sash protests and male students frequently do but membership is open only to women. "Men never make up their minds," says Mrs. Sinclair. "They are too laborious in their thinking."

Naturally there is no color bar. Black women can join but "we don't ask them," Mrs. Sinclair said. "They run a much greater risk than white women."

Author reveals cosmetic truths

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
A protein additive in shampoos is "usually derived from the cartilage and joints of cows and pigs," some face masks and wrinkle creams contain a serum extracted from the "chopped up bodies of unborn chicks," and to thicken cosmetics products, spermaceti, a waxy substance, is obtained from the head of the sperm whale.

Awareness of such things became so intriguing to Deborah Chase, 29, as she researched beauty material for an article that she parlayed the idea into a book, one with a scientific approach.

"In reading various medical publications, I changed my own thinking about beauty. I learned that dry skin doesn't cause wrinkles, that oily skin doesn't need moisturizers, that the hair needs water, not oil as we are constantly being told by experts," she said in an interview.

A one-time high school science talent winner who worked as a research assistant in the lab of the anatomy department of New York University when she attended a pre-med program there, she has written "The Medically Based No-Nonsense Beauty Book."

In preparing the book she used information from some 70 authors, who had written for medical journals and other publications, and she studied cosmetics chemistry textbooks which explain how various chemicals work in cosmetics — for example, "cream rinse has a chemical which relaxes hair," she says. She studied products on the market to determine those that contained essential ingredients. "If those ingredients are missing from a product you are wasting time and money," in her opinion.

Deborah Chase

A sunscreen is necessary to protect the skin from painful burning, and many experts believe the sun is also responsible for deep wrinkling of the skin. But few sunscreens provide total protection. A total sunscreen, she learned, is the thick white paste of zinc oxide used by lifeguards. A second type which can resist some or most ultraviolet rays includes sesame oil (which can resist 30 per cent of the ultraviolet rays) and other oils — coconut, peanut, olive and cottonseed (which resist about 20 per cent of the rays). When certain chemicals are added, para-aminobenzoic acid or, secondly, salicylate compounds, you get a more complete sunscreen and either of those should be sought in commercial products, she advises.

If these ingredients are not listed, the sunscreen is probably nothing more than a mixture of oils, waxes and emulsifiers, she contends, "and gives relatively scant protection from the sun."

Water is probably "the most essential ingredient for the skin and hair," she insists. Sun and many other things deplete the skin of moisture and dyes and bleaches dry the hair.

"Remove a hair and stretch it," she suggested, illustrating the point by removing one of her own dark hairs, which stretched about an inch. "When water is lacking, the hair loses this flexibility."

Ideas in the book begin with basic ones about the skin and how it grows and the soaps, cleansers, astringents and other products that are used on it, what they contain, and what they do or do not do. It goes on to hair and includes a program of care for straightened hair, a chapter on plastic surgery with illustrations, a table of protein values, and so on. Many do-it-yourself formulas are provided for skin and hair care, including easy-to-make astringents, cleansers and masks.

A beneficial clay mask for oily skin is made with 2 tablespoons of alcohol and one tablespoon of fuller's earth mixed to a paste. She also lists commercial products that contain the ingredients that her research has shown are necessary to a particular product.

Her husband, Dr. Neil Schacter, 31, now chief of inhalation therapy at Yale-New Haven Hospital, helped her on the basic physics and chemistry and brought home medical papers she needed for her research, particularly those to do with allergy and endocrine glands.

Much time and money can be wasted in trying to find products that do not cause an allergic reaction. Switching from one product to another is no guarantee that you are avoiding an offending substance, she maintains. An eyebrow pencil produced by one factory and marketed by at least five companies, selling from 29 cents to $1.50, was seized by the FDA because it contained coal tar. A contaminated brown eye shadow was packaged by three companies, and "many commonly used cosmetics ... are made by one source for many brand names ... you can buy the identical cosmetic at prices ranging from 39 cents to $7.50." Cosmetics can be tested for allergy by putting a little of the suspected substance on the skin and covering it with adhesive tape for 48 hours to see whether it causes redness, she suggests. (Doctors put it on the back, usually.)

Cigarettes and alcohol can be a detriment to pretty skin, she advises. Smoking can line the face and alcohol can rob the skin of water and dilate the blood vessels, causing small red lines. Drugs also interfere with the body's ability to obtain oxygen, she points out.

Miss Chase admits some habits are hard to give up — for example, she bites her nails, "but it doesn't bother me, so I don't do anything about it," she says.

("The Medically Based No-Nonsense Beauty Book" is published by Knopf.)

Ann Landers

Freeloaders egg parents to despair

Dear Ann Landers: We have two grown sons (mid-20s) who could hardly wait to leave home and get away from their square parents. They wanted complete freedom to do their own thing. So off they went with our assurance that we loved them and they could always come home if things got tough.

the free hotel is no longer operating? Forget it!

Your big mistake was not establishing the ground rules after the first "homecoming." To allow grown men to watch TV all night and sleep 'til noon doesn't square with the way they were raised.

I guess what I'm asking is this: Is it all right for me not to want any more sex? Please give me your opinion. — Don't Need It

Dear D.N.I.: It's all right with ME. What does your husband say? If he's content, you have no problem. If he complains, however, you'd better see a doctor and find out why at 36 you have no sex drive. It could be physical. And if it's psychological, you'd better look into THAT.

Polly's pointers

Medicine stain proves a toughie

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — The carpets in our dining room and kitchen had lots of spots and my husband had the bright idea of using a window glass cleaner on the carpets as well-known spot lifter had done no good. He sponged this on the spots and then rubbed it in with a brush and dried the areas with paper towels. Our carpets look like new and with no spots. (As always test first.) — MRS. E.S.

DEAR POLLY — One of my Pet Peeves is with the elastic in readymade garments. That in underwear and pajamas never lasts as long as the garments do. It seems the manufacturers could use a better quality. How would I put wide elastic in the waist of pajamas? — E.T.S.

DEAR E.T.S. — Elastic too wide to slip through a casing at the waist of pajama pants is best stitched to the inside with the zigzag stitch on the sewing machine. Of course, the easiest way when making new pajamas and when replacing elastic is to run it through a casing. Face or hem back the top of the pajama pants leaving an opening for the elastic. Edge stitch on the top fold, insert elastic and close opening. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — We needed a long zipper for a quilt cover and did not have one on hand that was long enough. My daughter suggested using two zippers that added up to the required length. By placing the zippers so the openings faced each other this worked just fine. — WILMA.

DEAR POLLY — This winter I had a lot of trouble with the electricity in my hair brushes, especially my round styling brush. One day after washing these brushes I put them in warm water with half a cup of fabric softener, let them soak a bit and then rinsed them in clear water. This worked beautifully and there was no more static. — MARY LOU.

DEAR POLLY — When cutting the heavy prickly skin off a fresh pineapple wear an oven mitt on the hand that holds the pineapple. Your hand will not get stuck or cut by these prickles. — SYLVIA.

DEAR POLLY — I like to wear beads and necklaces but always had so much trouble keeping them neat and untangled. I had a man's cane so put two brackets on my bedroom wall and laid the cane across the brackets and fastened the two ends. This game me a great place to hang my many beads and necklaces and it really looks very pretty on the wall. — DOROTHY R.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — My niece's little boy spilled half a bottle of mercurochrome on a gold-colored shag rug. She went to work on it immediately but was left with a pale pinkish circle that is very conspicuous. Is there any way to remove this stain? — EDNA.

DEAR EDNA — Authorities tell us that mercurochrome stains should be handled by a professional cleaner but are more often than not impossible to remove. However, if she wants to keep trying, and with no assurance that it will work, she might use a solution of a teaspoon of a natural detergent and a teaspoon of white vinegar added to a quart of warm water. — POLLY.

Preservation steps

The Pettis County Historical Society is taking some initial steps toward making Sedalia and the county more preservationist-minded in terms of their historic buildings and homes.

We support this long-overdue project. The need for it was amply demonstrated recently when it was discovered that the city was setting the machinery in motion that could have resulted in the demolition of what remains of the original George R. Smith home, the first house built in Sedalia. That particular problem remains unresolved.

The Historical Society is taking the right approach by first trying to establish some criteria for determining which buildings should be preserved. Just because something is old does not necessarily mean that it qualifies.

Appropriate agencies of the federal and state governments should be some help in developing guidelines, as would, say, an organization such as the American Institute of Architects.

Historic preservation is an uphill fight in most cases against the forces of economics and private interest, not to mention decay and just plain indifference. For these reasons the society will have to pick its targets with care, and then be prepared to make a strong case—and sometimes fight—on their behalf.

Such an effort will command the support of many Sedalians, especially those who have lived in the city for many years, have an appreciation of its past and are interested in keeping around a few tangible links to it.

Van waste of money

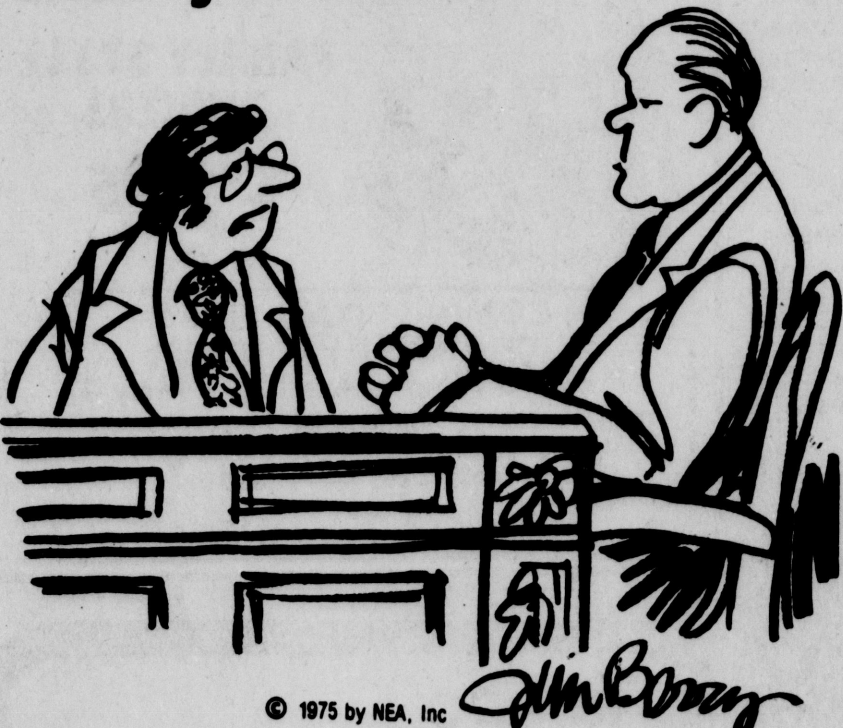

The police department's mobile crime laboratory, which was bought with considerable fanfare back in 1972, has up to now proved to be a rather expensive white elephant.

Loaded down with fancy equipment that apparently no one has been specifically trained to use, the $5,700 van has spent most of its life simply parked. The police department announced last week that it would henceforth be used in major case squad investigations.

This is the kind of boondoggle that has given the old Law Enforcement Assistance Council (which put up half the money) a black eye in many places. Too much of the taxpayers' money has been squandered on unnecessary police equipment.

We think the Sedalia police department should have whatever it requires to do its job, but only after it has shown a demonstrable need and the ability to utilize what it gets.

Will Thailand be the next domino?

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON — The downfall of Cambodia and South Vietnam will, after a suitable period of consolidation, free North Vietnam for a gradual step-up of operations in Northeastern Thailand.

This may be accompanied by an increase in Chinese support for the small but well-organized Peking-backed underground in the northwestern section of the country.

Access to Thailand is simple. The North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao already dominate most of Laos along the Thai border, a border so extended the Thai police and military have for years found it impossible to guard against infiltration.

The Thai underground is ripe for expansion. North Vietnamese and Chinese-trained cadre have been organizing in the region since 1954, and actively for the past 12 years, despite some intermittent setbacks.

Originally confined to the far northeast and northwest, with pockets in the extreme southwest, organizers have, for the past five years been slowly moving into the west central area in an "oil spot" type advance. That is, they have set up nuclei at selected points here and there. Each oil spot then expands in a slow, irregular fashion, the growth being hardly noticeable, except at intervals of roughly five years.

There may thus be no obvious outward change in Thailand over the next decade. It could take at least that time for the cadre to get their underground units in shape for effective open moves against the government.

Thai police and government friends tell me they and their associates travel in the hinterland only when it is absolutely necessary. When I traveled by automobile through 900 miles of the rural interior a number of years back, my companion, a government friend whose father had been prime minister, carefully placed a rifle in position for quick firing. Government officials and police are assaulted regularly.

The security problem is complicated by the fact that corruption is widespread, both in rural areas and in Bangkok. Smuggling from China has become a big-time operation, smoothed by bribery. The major profits go to a group of Peking-oriented Chinese merchants who plow a portion of their profits into the underground. Whether this is for protection, for future insurance or from conviction is not clear.

To understand what is happening in Thailand, one must understand that the preliminary underground thrust is not military. It rather centers on sabotage, propaganda, corruption of officials, with enough intermittent attacks on police and civilian officials to convince the local population the government can neither defend itself nor be relied on for protection. The argument: if they cannot protect themselves who can they protect?

Wide areas in Thailand are ripe for underground activity. Despite the general prosperity, poverty is endemic and people are without hope in extensive regions of the country.

Bangkok, for too long, has been Thailand. The government, business and prosperity center in that city. Despite sporadic attempts at widening the base, everywhere I went in the hinterland, in cities and rural towns alike, I found a wide emotional and political gap dividing the citizenry from the residents of Bangkok.

Thailand is now experimenting with democratic institutions. If that country is not to be destroyed, it needs help. Not U.S. troops. Not military aid primarily. Rather the kind of friendly civilian assistance which will strengthen the Thai in building a people-based government. The aid must be limited to what they ask for — not what we think they should have.

The strange case of missing pennies

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — It looks suspiciously as if some distinguished members of Congress may have sticky fingers.

In late 1973, 16 rare aluminum pennies were shown around Capitol Hill. Only two of them have been returned. The rest have mysteriously disappeared.

The missing 14 coins, according to experts, are worth thousands of dollars.

This has created an awkward predicament for the U. S. Mint, which has tried ever so delicately to retrieve the rare pennies from the Senate and House banking committees. These are the same committees, you see, which have jurisdiction over the Mint.

After repeated efforts had failed to recover the coins, the Mint's frustrated director, Mrs. Mary Brooks, considered turning the matter over to the Secret Service.

But she thought better of the idea. She was reluctant, understandably, to instigate an investigation of the committees that oversee her own operations.

The strange case of the missing pennies goes back to the copper shortage. To save copper, the moneymakers thought maybe they should mint pennies from aluminum.

This required special legislation, which the Senate and House Banking committees were considering. Mrs. Brooks passed out 16 aluminum prototypes to the committee members, so they could see what the proposed aluminum pennies would look like. That's the last she saw of all but two of the sample coins.

Meanwhile, copper prices began to drop and the aluminum penny idea was abandoned. The aluminum prototypes, accordingly, were sent to the Philadelphia mint to be melted down — that is, except for the 14 still held by the sticky-fingered legislators.

Which committee members kept the coins? Mrs. Brooks confessed to us that she has no idea. Spokesmen for both banking committees assured us they are trying to find out.

But the director of the Mint still doesn't want to offend her overseers on Capitol Hill. "I'm not worried," she told us sweetly. "The coins will show up eventually. I'm sure of that."

Footnote: It is illegal, incidentally, for anyone to own coin patterns struck after 1916. This doesn't diminish the under-the-table value, however, of the 14 aluminum pennies.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Senate, whose members talk a lot about economy, are preparing quietly to vote another $40 million for themselves to hire more staff help.

If the past is prologue, many of the new staff members would wind up at election time doing political work for their senatorial patrons.

The argument is that the senior senators wind up with most of the available employees. Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., the judiciary chairman, controls a budget, for example, of almost $5 million. Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., the commerce chairman, has $3.2 million to spend. And Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., the labor chairman, isn't far behind with a $2.8 million budget.

Their committee payrolls are fat in contrast with such new senators as Gary Hart, D-Colo., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Jake Garn, R-Utah, who scarcely have enough clerical help to keep up with their mail.

The extra $40 million, it is argued, would give the junior senators a break. But it is more likely that the new recruits would merely swell the political force on Capitol Hill.

The $40 million would permit the hiring of more than 1,000 new staff members. But they would need space to work and Capitol Hill is already overcrowded. Still more money would have to be appropriated, therefore, to provide additional facilities.

We have had access, meanwhile, to a secret tally of the senators' payrolls. This shows many senators aren't using the funds already available to them.

Sen. William Scott, R-Va., for one, has raised a howl for more staff members to help him with his committee work. Yet he left almost $190,000 of his "clerk hire" money unspent last year.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., also wants more staff help, yet he didn't spend $143,000 that was available for this purpose last year. Sen. James Pearson, R-Kan., another advocate of more staff money, left $134,000 in the till.

Here are others who want more money but didn't spend what they had: Sens. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., $86,400 left over; Clifford Case, R-N.J., $120,000 unspent; Carl Curtis, R-Neb., $46,500; Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, $100,000; Cliff Hansen, R-Wyo., $80,000; Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., $66,000; William Roth, R-Del., $51,000; Robert Taft, R-Ohio, $58,000 and John Tower, R-Tex., $78,000.

Congress would serve the public better by cutting down, not building up the payroll in Washington.

WITCH HUNT: After we exposed drug trafficking by Paraguayan officials, the military government of dictator Alfredo Stroessner began a witch hunt for our sources in Paraguay.

We have now learned that they arrested a newsman, Roberto Thompson, and held him illegally for three months simply on suspicion. But finally, Stroessner's secret police realized they had blundered and Thompson was released.

Neighbor to north complains

WASHINGTON — While Americans have been preoccupied with stories of military disaster in Indochina and diplomatic failure in the Middle East, some worrisome developments in this hemisphere have virtually gone unnoticed.

Rowan

We are having growing troubles with our neighbors — Canada to the north and several countries to the south. Yet, 90 per cent of Americans are probably unaware of these new difficulties because they are so accustomed to taking Canadians, Mexicans and Costa Ricans for granted.

But Canada's foreign minister, Allan J. MacEachen, has made it clear in numerous speeches recently that Canada has ended the "special relationship" that long existed between Canada and the United States. This means that "the Canadian attitude on a range of questions can no longer be taken for granted," says Marcel Cadieux, Canada's ambassador to the United States.

This "Canadian revolution" has been sharpest in the economic field where, as MacEachen puts it, "the issue is our economic independence."

The foreign minister points out that the U.S. absorbs 35 per cent of all the goods produced in Canada, and that U.S. investors control more than 75 per cent of the assets of some key Canadian industries. With 88.5 per cent of Canadians urging greater Canadian control of the economy, the Canadian government has taken several measures to slow down and control U.S. purchases of Canadian firms and resources.

MacEachen suggests that the final straw in pushing Canada to strengthen ties with Japan and Europe and lessen her vulnerability to U.S. actions was the shocking economic measures President Nixon announced in August 1971 — measures that had deep repercussions in Canada.

This Canadian drive for "independence" has produced some irritations and hurt feelings over oil, energy policies in general, trade with Cuba.

MacEachen admits that some U.S. interests felt that Canada abused them during the energy crisis provoked by the Arab oil boycott. But the foreign secretary says bluntly: "We could not be expected to sacrifice our own needs to meet the oil consumption requirements of the United States." Furthermore, MacEachen warns, Canadians will develop mineral resources at a pace Canadians consider best, "and not in accord with American interests which appear to tend towards the rapid exploitation of known resources, accelerated exploration of new resources and increased imports of resources in their raw form."

Cadieux and MacEachen say repeatedly that there is nothing "anti-American" about Canada's policies. But MacEachen has said that "relations are likely to become more, not less, difficult."

Canada has taken steps to prohibit Canadian companies "from obeying foreign laws and orders." MacEachen made it clear that neither the U.S. Trading With the Enemy Act nor corporate policy made in the United States can deter Canadian companies from trading with Cuba or anyone else.

Canada has also moved against what some consider "U.S. cultural imperialism." The government has announced measures that could drive Time magazine and Reader's Digest out of Canada and stop Canadian firms from advertising on U.S. TV stations which are viewed by large numbers of Canadians.

In the defense field, Canadians hold that the Soviet bomber threat to North America has receded, erasing the need for more closely integrated defense arrangements between the United States and Canada.

It would be alarmist to suggest that our relations with Canada approach a crisis. But we ought not be unmindful of the fears that motivate Canadian policy.

"In the early stages of our development we were imperiled by the fear of political annexation from the south," says Cadieux. "Our concern now is that our independent economic existence and cultural integrity will be squashed by the might of the American giant."

It is just such fears that lie at the heart of so much trouble in the world — even trouble between neighbors and friends.

The government report on grain stocks as of April 1, to be issued April 24, may have some influence on the trend of soybean prices, especially if the stocks are substantially different from those now generally expected by soybean processors and the users of soybean meal and oil.

The stocks report, however, could have much more influence on the prices of corn and other feed grains than on the soybean prices. This reason: Feed grain supplies appear to be much tighter than the supply of soybeans. The carryover of feed grains now appears likely to be no more than enough to meet needs for three weeks.

Packed soil
Some gardeners are complaining about their garden being hard and packed. This condition can be alleviated somewhat by the adding of 50 pounds gypsum per 500 square feet. Next year a fall plowing of this garden site will do much to improve the soil condition at garden planting time next spring. The addition of any organic matter or peat moss such as your leaves is a help.

Minimum tillage
Soil insect problems and mice in minimum tillage practices can be more of a problem than in conventional tillage. If your tillage system involves disking prior to planting, Aldrin or one of its substitutes should be broadcast and disked in for the control of white grubs, wireworms, seed corn beetle, seed corn maggot and cutworms below the ground. You can get control of these insects except for cutworms by using Furadan 10G at 20 pounds per acre applied in the row at planting time.

The five highest producing herds for the month were Kenneth Hall, Cloyd Merk, Richard Lenz, Dale Hansen and Robert Longan.

The dairies with the highest producing cows during the month were topped by one cow in the Cloyd Merk dairy, Richard Lenz two, Paul Davis two, Longan dairy two, Eldon Lenz & Sons, one, Roland Oelrichs, one, Robert Wilshusen, one and Kenneth and Gale Lenz with one. This is the ranking eleven highest producing cows in the testing association during the month of February.

Moynihan to replace Scali

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daniel Patrick Moynihan, former ambassador to India, probably will be named to replace John A. Scali as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, according to an administration source.

Although the source declined Sunday night to say why the change was contemplated, there were reports that Scali was being considered for another high government post.

Moynihan, 48, recently returned to a position at Harvard after serving for 22 months in India. Before that, he was a domestic affairs adviser to Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon.

He recently told reporters the United States should adopt a parliamentary posture of opposition toward the third world majority and "make its displeasure known daily."

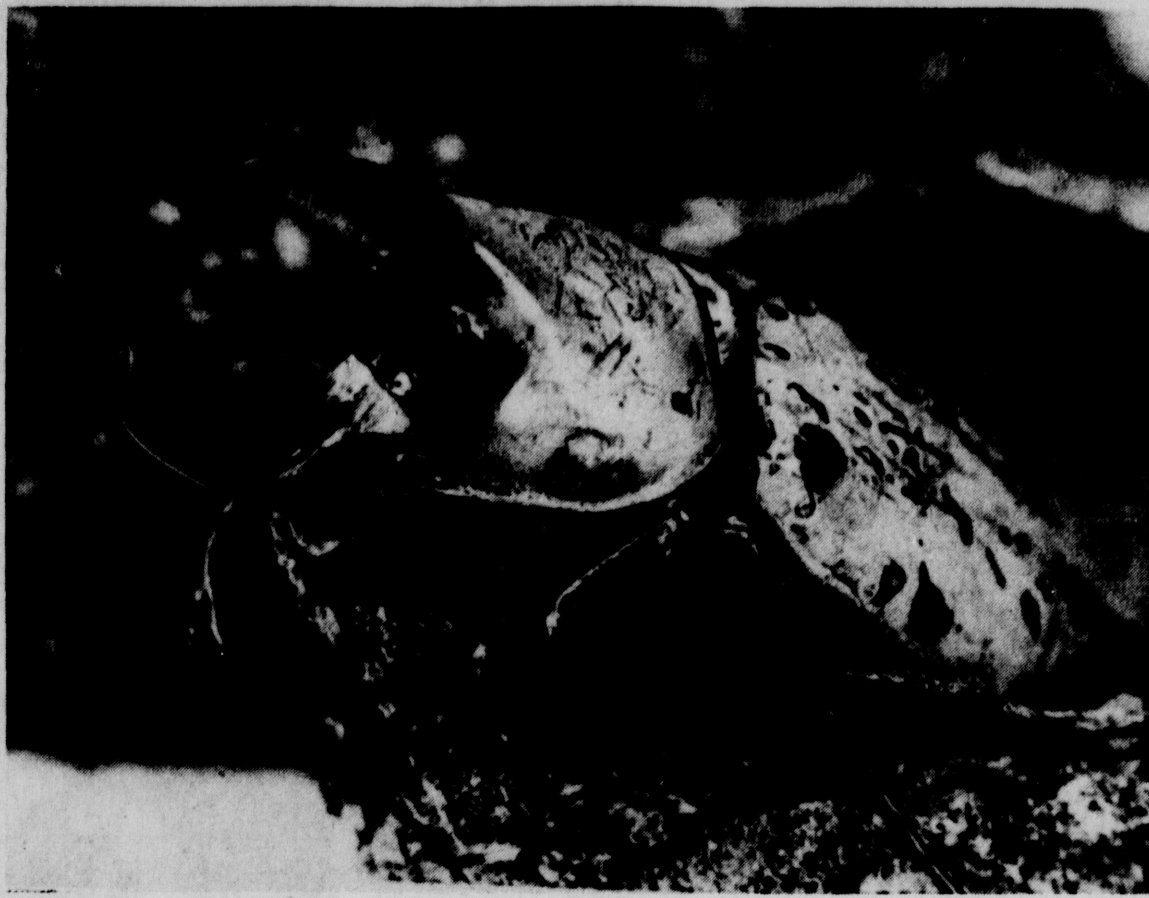

He said the nation should assume a role in world affairs of "critique, criticism and, if necessary, attack."

Scali was named by President Nixon in December of 1972 to the U.N. post. He is a former reporter for The Associated Press and the American Broadcasting Co.

Scali, 56, repeatedly criticized the last U.N. General Assembly, saying that "one-sided, unrealistic resolutions" might cause the United States to reassess its commitment to the international organization.

He told the General Assembly last December that the United Nations would "fade into the shadow world of rhetoric" if a majority kept pushing through resolutions that offended an influential minority.

"When the rule of the majority becomes the tyranny of the majority, the minority will cease to respect it," Scali said.

Sklod was a finalist in two of the categories, including: feature writing for a story on the long days of veterinarians, and for a series on aging among rural Americans.

The awards are part of the NFEA's annual spring meeting here. The two-day program includes meetings today with Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz; William T. Farm editors also were scheduled to hear today from Richard Margolis, chairman of Rural America, Inc.; and Richard E. Bell, deputy assistant secretary of agriculture for international affairs and commodity programs.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, was scheduled to speak at the NFEA's banquet tonight.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department expert said today that 1975-76 will be a pivotal season for the world's supply of oilseed, primarily soybeans.

Alan E. Holz of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the weather is "the key factor in a scenario that could mean either continued short supplies and high prices for oilseeds and their products, or the beginning of a new era of abundance."

Holz, in this week's "Foreign Agriculture" published by his agency, said that current production forecasts point to abundant supplies but also noted similar indications existed a year ago for 1974-75 output.

Instead, he said, poor weather cut into 1975 U.S. soybean and corn crops and launched what he called another price surge for those commodities.

The United States produces 65 to 75 per cent of the world's soybeans, the main oilseed in the export channels. Brazil, however, has emerged as a major producer and "is now the single most important U.S. competitor in world markets" for oilseeds and their products of meal and oil, Holz said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers in Brazil are being guaranteed $7.30 a bushel for wheat by their government's price-support program, an increase of 34 per cent from last year, the Agriculture Department said today. Additionally, the depart-

Consulting firm recommends Bell rate hike be approved

DALLAS (AP) — A consulting firm hired by the City of Dallas to investigate a requested hike in telephone rates has recommended that most of the rate hike be approved.

The Stanford Research Institute (SRI) of California said Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., customers in Dallas are faced with either higher rates or poorer service.

Bell has asked the city council for a $23 million rate hike.

SRI recommended that all but $464,000 of the request be approved, resulting in rate hikes of between 11 and 14 per cent for Dallas telephone customers.

SRI said the increase could be implemented by either one of two formulas.

Both formulas call for raising pay telephone charges from 10 cents to 20 cents, increasing business phone charges between $2 and $3 monthly, and increasing installation charges from $15 to $25 for residences and from $25 to $51 for business phones.

One formula would raise the monthly charge for a private residential line from $7.33 to $8.40. The other formula calls for higher residential rates dependent upon the location of the telephone from a central zone, where rates would be cheaper.

Inquiries made by SRI, which was paid $64,000 by the city, also show Bell used the same rate formula in Dallas as in other Texas cities and the same formula used in previous rate increases granted by the city council.

As a result of Bell's formula for determining the need for rate increases, SRI said Dallas and other Texas cities should seek to develop an alternative formula based on different bookkeeping methods, and a strategy designed to gain acceptance of the formula by courts of necessity.

A lawsuit filed in San Antonio last year by a fired Bell executive and the family of a deceased executive alleges the utility kept two sets of financial books—one for internal use and another for presentation to city councils in rate cases.

Royals sweep Texas; lead AL West by 1 1/2

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals are off to the best start in the club's history and Manager Jack McKeon contends, "We aren't even hot yet."

Kansas City rode the six-hit pitching of Al Fitzmorris to a 2-0 victory over Texas Sunday—the ninth triumph in 11 games and fifth in a row for the Royals.

For the slumping Rangers, who had been picked by some to challenge Oakland for the American League West Division title, it was their third straight loss and seventh in eight games at home.

McKeon said, "We're winning with good pitching—that's 80 per cent of the game. We're not tearing the cover off the ball. We're just playing solid, consistent, aggressive baseball."

The Kansas City pitching staff has a 2.17 earned run average.

Fitz (Fitzmorris) has been the most underrated pitcher in the American League for the last two years," McKeon said. "All he does is win. He doesn't get a lot of publicity because he is not an overpowering type of pitcher. With his stuff, it sometimes looks like he has had it from the start. He has a great sinker and slider. It's hard to know when he loses his stuff or is getting tired."

Fitzmorris, winning his third game of the season without a loss, said, "I was throwing my sinker most of the day."

Steve Hargan, who gave up only six hits, was the loser. He was tagged for a two-run triple in the second inning by Fred Patek. Hargan now is 1-1 for the season. Patek was hitting .179 prior to the game.

"Patek's hit was an example of how things have been going," McKeon said. "We have someone different do the job every game."

Rangers Manager Billy Martin was calm after the game as his team prepared to leave for Oakland.

"Glad to be going on the road?" Martin was asked.

Martin only smiled.

"Nobody can match our five starters," McKeon said. "They might match us one and two, but not five deep."

The Royals' starters are Fitzmorris, Nelson Briles, Steve Busby, Paul Splittorff and Bruce Dal Canton.

To show you how well things have been going for McKeon, he hasn't had a chance to use Dal Canton.

Evert pockets top prize

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Chris Evert says she would like more tournaments like this past weekend's $100,000 World Series of Women's Tennis to which only four players were invited.

But, then why not? She pocketed the $50,000 first prize — the largest sum ever in women's tennis — after downing a determined and angry Billie Jean King 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 Sunday before a national television audience.

Miss Evert, the year's leading money winner with $183,450, said, however, she did not want to win just for the money. "The $25,000 second-place prize would have been good," she said.

In the consolation match, Evonne Goolagong of Australia picked up $15,000 by beating Russia's Olga Morozova 2-6, 6-3, 6-3. Miss Morozova's $10,000 prize will go to the Russian Tennis Federation as usual.

The scene was set for a true championship match Sunday after Miss Evert trounced Miss Morozova 6-4, 6-0 Saturday and Ms. King blasted Miss Goolagong 6-1, 6-3. Each match lasted about an hour.

Sunday, Miss Evert and Ms.

King traded shots for over two hours before Miss Evert took the match with a 5-2 tiebreaker in the final set.

The closeness of the match where only five points out of the 239 played separated winner from loser was almost overshadowed by Ms. King's anger over a call by a linesman in the last set with Ms. King leading 6-5.

Ms. King claimed a linesman had initially indicated a return of service by Miss Evert was out of play. The linesman's hand signal indicated the ball had hit in play and he refused to answer Ms. King's heated questions about his call.

After the match Ms. King said she had wanted an answer from the linesman. "What are they there for?" she asked in a news conference.

Tournament umpire Jason Morton refused to change the linesman's call and Ms. King went on to lose the set, the tiebreaker and the match.

Morton said although the linesman did start to indicate an out signal he changed his sign to show the shot good. "Things like this are a normal occurrence," Morton said.

Timmons doesn't agree with NCAA

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Track Coach Bob Timmons of the University of Kansas says he is disturbed over a recent National Collegiate Athletic Association directive that rules ineligible any college athlete who goes on a proposed athletic tour of China.

"I can understand the NCAA reasoning that it is trying to protect a student academically," said Timmons. "It doesn't want to have a student miss a lot of school. I can understand missing school but how can a professor anywhere be disturbed to have a youngster go to China on a mission like that?"

The proposed tour would send a team of U.S. athletes to China next month.

"Athletes would give an eye tooth to go to China," Timmons continued. "This would be something different than a meet with Russia. We've done that."

"We seem to be at cross purposes. We have the United States trying to cement relations with China. We seem to have administrative bodies saying different things."

Currently, the NCAA and the Amateur Athletic Union are in the midst of a feud that has existed for several years.

"It just could be the AAU and NCAA issue," Timmons said. "I think maybe it is. If it is over that feud, then it's bad. We should send our very best athletes, and I don't care where they come from."

Avery feels he can earn starting spot

CINCINNATI (AP) — Angry at being traded? Not Ken Avery, oldest member of the Cincinnati Bengals youth-accented linebacking squad. "Now I can turn loose and do what I do best."

Avery, who turns 31 next month, was traded to the rebuilding Kansas City Chiefs last week for an undisclosed future draft choice.

He feels qualified to step into a starting spot after serving a six year apprenticeship with the Bengals.

"I feel I've learned more in six years under Paul Brown than all the rest of my years in football. He made a believer of me with his discipline. Everything is systemized and coordinated," said Avery, who got his wish by being traded.

"I'm leaving with no chip on my shoulder or any animosity. As far as I'm concerned Paul Brown is a first-class person. But I want to play," said Avery, who has spent the past two years in a backup role that grated him.

"Paul Wiggins talked to me the other day and said they've been trying to get me for some time," said Avery.

He'll be joining longtime friend Vince Costello, former Bengals defensive coach.

He blamed last year's 7-7 collapse of the Bengals on the players strike, the trade of middle linebacker Bill Bergey and wholesale injuries.

The 6-foot, 230-pounder, said "I'm leaving one of the best teams in football. They have the biggest pool of talent anywhere. It's scary. They've got so much potential."

Missouri cage all-stars top Kansas by one

SALINA, Kan. (AP) — The Missouri college seniors have won the first game with the top college seniors from Kansas in basketball.

Missouri, thanks to a 25-foot corner jump shot by Hollis Miller of Drury with 10 seconds remaining, edged the Kansas 108-107 Saturday night in the first annual All-Star game involving senior college players of the two states.

Miller made 25 points in the tight battle. Mark Stipetich of William Jewell added 22. Danny Knight of Kansas topped the Kansas team with 24 points and was followed by Jayhawk teammate Rick Suttle, who flipped in 21.

Missouri led 28-18 after one period but Kansas had the edge in scoring in each of the last three quarters. Missouri, outthit from the floor, had a perfect 14-for-14 night at the free throw line.

Center nips Kewps by half point

Kansas City Center edged Columbia Hickman by one-half point Saturday for the championship of the first-annual Sedalia-Liberty Girls Invitational Swimming meet at the Sedalia Junior High School pool.

Center nipped Hickman, 76-75 1/2.

Co-host Liberty finished third with total of 63, while Columbia Rock Bridge (44), Kansas City Van Horn (23 1/2) and Smith-Cotton (4) rounded out the six-team field.

Center claimed four first-place finishes, while Columbia

Hickman also won four events. Liberty won two firsts, while Rock Bridge claimed the other top spot.

The competition was the last for Smith-Cotton before the district meet May 3 in Columbia.

Pittsburgh shuts out St. Louis Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Left-handers Ken Brett and Jim Rooker have passed their tests, and the Pittsburgh Pirates may be off and running in National League baseball.

The 5-foot-11 Brett, who hadn't pitched in a game since March 25, proved his fitness Sunday by stopping the St. Louis Cardinals on four hits through six innings and watching reliever Dave Giusti mop up.

Brett's form in a 5-0 Pirates victory followed a route-going winning performance a night earlier by Rooker and left Manager Danny Murtaugh in a euphoric mood.

"I said before that if our pitchers recover from their injuries we've got a heck of a chance to have a good staff," Murtaugh noted optimistically.

"I was pleasantly surprised by what Brett did," Murtaugh added. "I like his control from the point that he had good stuff and was the ball over the plate."

Brett, who underwent surgery during the off-season to remove bone chips from his elbow, had been idle for nearly a month after popping a muscle in throwing arm during spring training.

"I'd been throwing live batting practice," the 26-year-old pitcher said, "but it's a different situation than throwing in a game."

"I knew I'd feel good physically," he added. "It was just a question of whether I'd go out there and get ahead of the batters. It turned out better than I'd expected."

A four-run Pirates second inning, abetted by losing pitcher John Denny's costly error, helped keep the pressure off Brett, who faced only 23 batters and was aided by a double play.

Richie Zisk ignited the burst with a double off the wall, and Denny's error on Brett's grounder to the mound came between two singles and Richie Hebner's two-run triple.

"Those guys," lamented the 22-year-old Denny, 2-1. "You

Kansas City puts Hayes on waivers

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Running back Wendell Hayes has been waived by the Kansas City Chiefs.

The National Football League club said Saturday the new-look Chiefs had discarded any plans for the use of Hayes in 1975. Hayes had played in the Chiefs' backfield seven seasons.

One of the factors involved in the decision to place Hayes on waivers was the emergency of Cleophus Miller as a fine, young runner last year. Hayes is 34.

Bulls pound Kings

Hayes' 46 leads Capitol Bullets to 97-93 win

By The Associated Press
Modesty may have caused Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets to say, "We don't like to rely on one player."

But the fact remains that the Bullets continually need a lot of points from Hayes to win.

They got them Sunday. Hayes poured in 46 points, his career high in National Basketball Association playoff competition, and the Bullets edged the Buffalo Braves 97-93 for a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series.

It was the 20th straight time in which Hayes had scored 30 or more points that the Bullets had won.

In a Western Conference semifinal game Sunday, the Chicago Bulls routed the Kansas City-Omaha Kings 104-77 for a 3-2 advantage in their best-of-seven series.

In the other semifinals, Boston leads Houston 2-1 in the East following the Rockets' 117-102 triumph Saturday and Golden State and Seattle are tied 2-2 in the West after the SuperSonics' 111-94 victory Saturday.

The sizzling Hayes connected on 19 of 26 field goal attempts and added eight free throws in outscoring Buffalo's Bob McAdoo, who had wrecked the Bullets with 50 points in Game 4. McAdoo, the league's scoring champion for the second consecutive year, collected 34 points in Sunday's nationally televised game.

Hayes, however, denied he was in a personal battle with McAdoo. "I don't believe in personal duels," Hayes said. "I do whatever it takes to win. We've won all year with the five starters and the bench. We don't like to rely on one player."

Nevertheless, it was proven throughout the season and again is being proven in the playoffs that Washington needs big production from Hayes. In the previous two games that the Bullets beat Buffalo in the playoffs, he scored 34 and 30 points. In the two losses, he got only 20 and 16 points.

Wes Unseld clinched the Bullets' victory by grabbing one of Hayes' few missed shots and putting it in with five seconds remaining for a 96-93 lead. Unseld was fouled on the shot and completed a three-point play.

The teams meet in Game 6 Wednesday night at Buffalo.

Bulls 104, Kings 77
Chicago parlayed Bob Love's 30 points and an air-tight defense in crushing the error-prone, poor-shooting Kings in the second half of the league's nationally televised doubleheader. The Bulls held Nate Archibald, the Kings' high-scoring guard, to 13 points, well below his average. Archibald hit only four of 16 shots from the floor.

"We missed simple shots," complained Kings' Coach Phil Johnson, who indicated he would change his starting lineup for Game 6 at Kansas City Wednesday night. "Larry McNeill is not helping defensively."

Wire-to-wire win

Sandra Palmer's margin stands up

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Palmer. That's about all there is to say about the 1975 $200,000 Dinah Shore Women's Circle Golf Tournament.

She almost made the world's most expensive women's golf tournament a bore. Then she added a dash of excitement at the end as she won the event she had led from start to finish.

Coolly composed through chilly winds and then warm desert breezes, the miniscule Ft. Worth, Tex., native ran off three consecutive two-under-par 70s then finally slipped up a bit when she bogeyed the last hole for a 73 Sunday but still finished with a five-under-par 283, one stroke in front of Kathy McMullen.

"I really got sort of tired," the 5-foot-1 Miss Palmer said afterwards, slumping in a chair. "And anytime you get tired you make mental mistakes like I made." She made three bogies in the final round, one more than she had in the three earlier rounds combined.

"I'm just glad it came at the end," she added. Miss Palmer's three earlier rounds on the 6,347-yard Mission Hills course, a par-72, kept her ahead by at least a stroke from the outset and she took a three-stroke lead over Miss McMullen into the final 18 holes after her challenger charged in with 66 Saturday.

Sandra Palmer

"I really felt this pressure out there and I had to hit every shot in my bag because McMullen was playing so well," she said. "I think I played better than I know how. When you're leading you know they're coming at you and it's a miserable feeling."

Miss Palmer held a three-stroke lead over Miss McMullen, her closest pursuer, going into the final nine holes.

But the sturdy blonde from Florida, still seeking her first victory on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, birdied the 11th and 12th holes and quickly pulled to within a stroke of the lead. Miss Palmer, in the threesome behind her competitor, took a stroke back when she birdied the 12th herself and Miss McMullen fell to the pressure when she doubled bogies the 14th hole.

The two finished well in front of the rest of the field.

Miss Palmer collected $32,000 for the victory and $3,000 more for leading three rounds. Miss McMullen won $21,000 for second, more than she has ever amassed in any one of her five years as a pro.

Carol Mann, Chako Higuchi of Japan and Carole Jo Skala tied for third, four strokes off the pace at one-under-par 287, each winning $10,500, and a half-dozen including early challenger Jocelyne Bourassa and Jane Blalock were tied for sixth at one over par. The spunky Miss Bourassa, a favorite of the crowds, fell out of contention when she bogeyed three straight holes on the back nine Sunday.

Sue Roberts, a two-time winner on the tour last year who captured the Bing Crosby International in Mexico last month, and veteran Marlene Hagge, on the tour for 25 years, each won $5,000 for sinking a hole-in-one during the tournament.

The tournament matches only golfers who have top three finishes on the LPGA tour.

McGee wins Pensacola tourney with 13-under

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Jerry McGee figured this was his week before the first shot was fired in the $125,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.

"Wednesday night, I ate oysters on the half shell and the first oyster I ate, I got a pearl," an elated McGee said Sunday after ending more than eight years of frustration on the pro golf tour by capturing his first victory.

"I told Jill (his wife) this may be the week," he said. "I didn't want to mention it before today because it might have jinxed me."

McGee appeared on the verge of blowing his shot at victory when he played the front side in a fat 38, three-over-par, but regained his composure, strung together three straight birdies beginning at No. 10 and broke out of a deadlock with another birdie on 16 to win the $25,000 first prize with a 13-under-par 271 total.

The closing 70 on the 6,679-yard, par-71 Pensacola Country Club course gave McGee a two-shot victory over Wally Armstrong, a soft-spoken 29-year-old who saw his dream of a first victory vanish with two bogeys on the final three holes.

McGee said he thought he had only a one-shot edge until he saw the scoreboard as he strolled to the 18th green.

"I was thinking so much about getting back in the Masters coming up the 18th fairway," he said. "I played in it twice and I was really disappointed when I didn't get to play in it this year."

The victory automatically qualifies McGee for next year's Masters, plus the Tournament of Champions in California which begins Thursday.

"They'll probably think I'm a caddy out there," said the 5-foot-9, 160-pounder.

McGee was playing in the final threesome with his friend, Australian Bruce Crampton, who at one point was lodged in a three-way tie with McGee and Armstrong at 12-under before falling back with a bogey on 15 and another on 17.

"I don't think anybody has ever appreciated a victory on the tour more than I have this one," said McGee, who credited his attractive wife with helping him.

"Jill got me thinking in the right direction, she calmed me down," he said. "She is the sole reason why I'm sitting here now."

Islanders remain alive; Toronto out of NHL play

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It was a do-or-die weekend in the National Hockey League playoffs. The New York Islanders did and the Toronto Maple Leafs died.

The Islanders, down three games to none in their quarterfinal series with the Pittsburgh Penguins, took the series back to Pittsburgh for Tuesday night's fifth game with a 3-1 triumph in Sunday afternoon's nationally televised contest.

In the weekend's other Stanley Cup action, the Montreal Canadiens took a 3-1 lead in their series with a 4-0 triumph over the Canucks at Vancouver Saturday; and the Buffalo Sabres made it 3-1 against the Chicago Black Hawks with a 6-2 triumph at Chicago Sunday night.

Islanders 3, Penguins 1
The Islanders know well that no team has lost the first three playoff games and come back to win a series since the Maple Leafs did it to the Detroit Red Wings in the 1942 Stanley Cup finals.

Third-period goals 39 seconds apart by rookie Clark Gillies and veteran Jean-Paul Parise broke a 1-1 tie and sent the Islanders to triumph.

Andre St. Laurent scored a power play goal for New York in the first period, then Bob Kelly gave the Penguins a temporary tie with a power play score in the second period.

The odds are with the Penguins. They have lost only once in the last 33 games at their Civic Arena home.

Sabres 6, Black Hawks 2

"The team wanted to win and when we get a good effort, there are not many teams that can beat us," said Buffalo Coach Floyd Smith of his Sabres, who can move into the semifinals with a victory at Buffalo Tuesday night.

"I'd say we're in the driver's seat now," said Smith. "And we'll be sky high Tuesday night at home."

Rick Martin, Gil Perreault and Rene Robert scored in the third period to break open what had been a tight game. Jim Lorentz, Pete McNab and Dan Gare had the other Buffalo goals.

Grant Mulvey and Phil Russell scored for the Black Hawks, who could not capitalize on four power plays in the second period.

Cousey named to coach WCC

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Boston Celtics' great Bob Cousy will coach the Atlantic Coast Conference team in next weekend's second annual Four Star Basketball Classic here.

The classic pits teams comprised of graduating seniors from the ACC, the Southeastern Conference, the Pacific 8 Conference and the Missouri Valley Conference.

Cotton Fitzsimmons, coach of the Atlanta Hawks, will coach the SEC team. Joe Mullaney, coach of the Memphis Sounds, will direct the MVC squad and Butch van Breda Kolff, coach of the New Orleans Jazz, will coach the Pacific 8 team.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Nebraska, leading the Big Eight Conference baseball race with a 5-1 record, faces a major test Friday and Saturday when the Cornhuskers are hosts to third-place Iowa State.

The Cyclones are 6-5 and have the league's No. 1 pitcher, Del Ochsner, who ran his record to 5-0 Sunday when he shut out Kansas State 2-0. Ochsner hasn't yielded an earned run during the conference campaign.

Second-place Oklahoma, with a 6-3 mark, is at home against Missouri, 4-5, also for three games during the two days. In other games Friday and Saturday, Kansas State invades Colorado and Kansas travels to Oklahoma State.

Nebraska remained in first over the weekend without seeing any action. The Huskers' three-game series at Colorado had to be canceled because of snow on Friday and wet grounds Saturday and Sunday.

Oklahoma took two of three games from Oklahoma State. The Sooners, after winning 4-0, lost the nightcap of a doubleheader Saturday 4-3. O-State is 5-6.

Before Ochsner blanked the Wildcats, K-State slugged the Cyclones 17-2 and now has a 4-5 record. Missouri ran its record to 4-5 by winning over Kansas 8-6 in 13 innings Sunday. The game was started Saturday but had to be suspended because of darkness. The losing Jayhawks are also 4-5.

Colorado, 1-5, hopes to climb out of the basement in its series with Kansas State.

This week's schedule:
Today — Arizona State at Oklahoma; Arizona State vs. Oklahoma at Oklahoma City.

Tuesday — Creighton at Iowa State 2, John Brown at Oklahoma State 2, Fort Hays, Kan., State at Colorado 2, Washburn at Kansas 2, Missouri Western at Missouri 2, Nebraska Omaha at Nebraska 2.

Friday and Saturday—Iowa State at Nebraska 3, Kansas State at Colorado 3, Kansas at Oklahoma State 3, Missouri at Oklahoma 3.

They won a three-hole playoff over Carl Oswald, Pete Holloway, Bill Gibson and Bill Labus, Sr. Both were tied with a 67 at the end of regulation play. The next tournament, a couples event, is scheduled May 4.

Frank McGuire is in his 11th season as University of South Carolina basketball coach.

Oswald: "If you could guess right all the time, you wouldn't have to do anything else well to be a winner. Experts do a lot of successful guessing, but when possible they try to substitute certainty for guesswork."
 Jim: "I'm looking at the hand you are about to bring up. I suppose South won the first trick with the ten of hearts and led a diamond."
 Oswald: "He certainly did but only after a lot of agonizing. When dummy's queen held the trick he relaxed, remarked, 'I sure played the right suit' and went happily about the business of winning game and rubber."
 Jim: "South's guess had some merit. If he had to lead a spade or diamond, the diamond was correct. There was a 68 per cent chance that the suit would break 3-2. If it did, it wouldn't really matter who had which ace, since three tricks in diamonds would be enough to guarantee success of the three notrump contract."

Oswald: "However, there was no need for any guess at all. Instead of studying diamonds and spades South should have led a club to dummy's ace at trick two and then led a small diamond from dummy."

Jim: "This play would guarantee the contract against any and all bad suit divisions and other bludgeonings of fate."

Nixon plans to give tapes to library

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former President Richard M. Nixon says that if the courts permit, he will give the White House tapes which forced his resignation to a planned Nixon Presidential Library at the University of Southern California. Announcement of plans to build the library to house tapes, Presidential papers and materials from other periods in Nixon's career was made jointly Sunday by the university and the former chief executive. The acquisition of presidential materials by the library is contingent upon a successful challenge to legislation requiring that all Nixon's presidential materials remain in Washington, D.C.

In other reports concerning Nixon:

—Penthouse magazine says that for several months in 1970 a government-employed, foreign-born house painter, "apparently controlled by one of the intelligence agencies," bugged the Oval Office in the White House, perhaps without Nixon's knowledge.

—A former Internal Revenue Service auditor, Ralph F. LaCross, says Nixon's name was expunged from tax records to cover up his underpayment of income taxes. But the former chief of IRS internal security, Francis I. Geibel, says he ordered Nixon's name removed from tax records because of leaks to the press about Nixon's returns.

—Nixon gives his wife credit for saving his life when he was desperately ill last October, according to the current issue of McCall's magazine. Mrs. Nixon credits God and the doctors.

Final negotiations for the presidential library took place Saturday when Nixon met with USC trustees at the Palm Springs estate of Walter H. Annenberg, ambassador to Great Britain during the Nixon administration.

In a statement released by USC, Nixon noted his legal challenge to the new federal law which gives the government possession of his Presidential papers and bars the General Services Administration from destroying the White House tapes as an agreement between Nixon and the GSA provides.

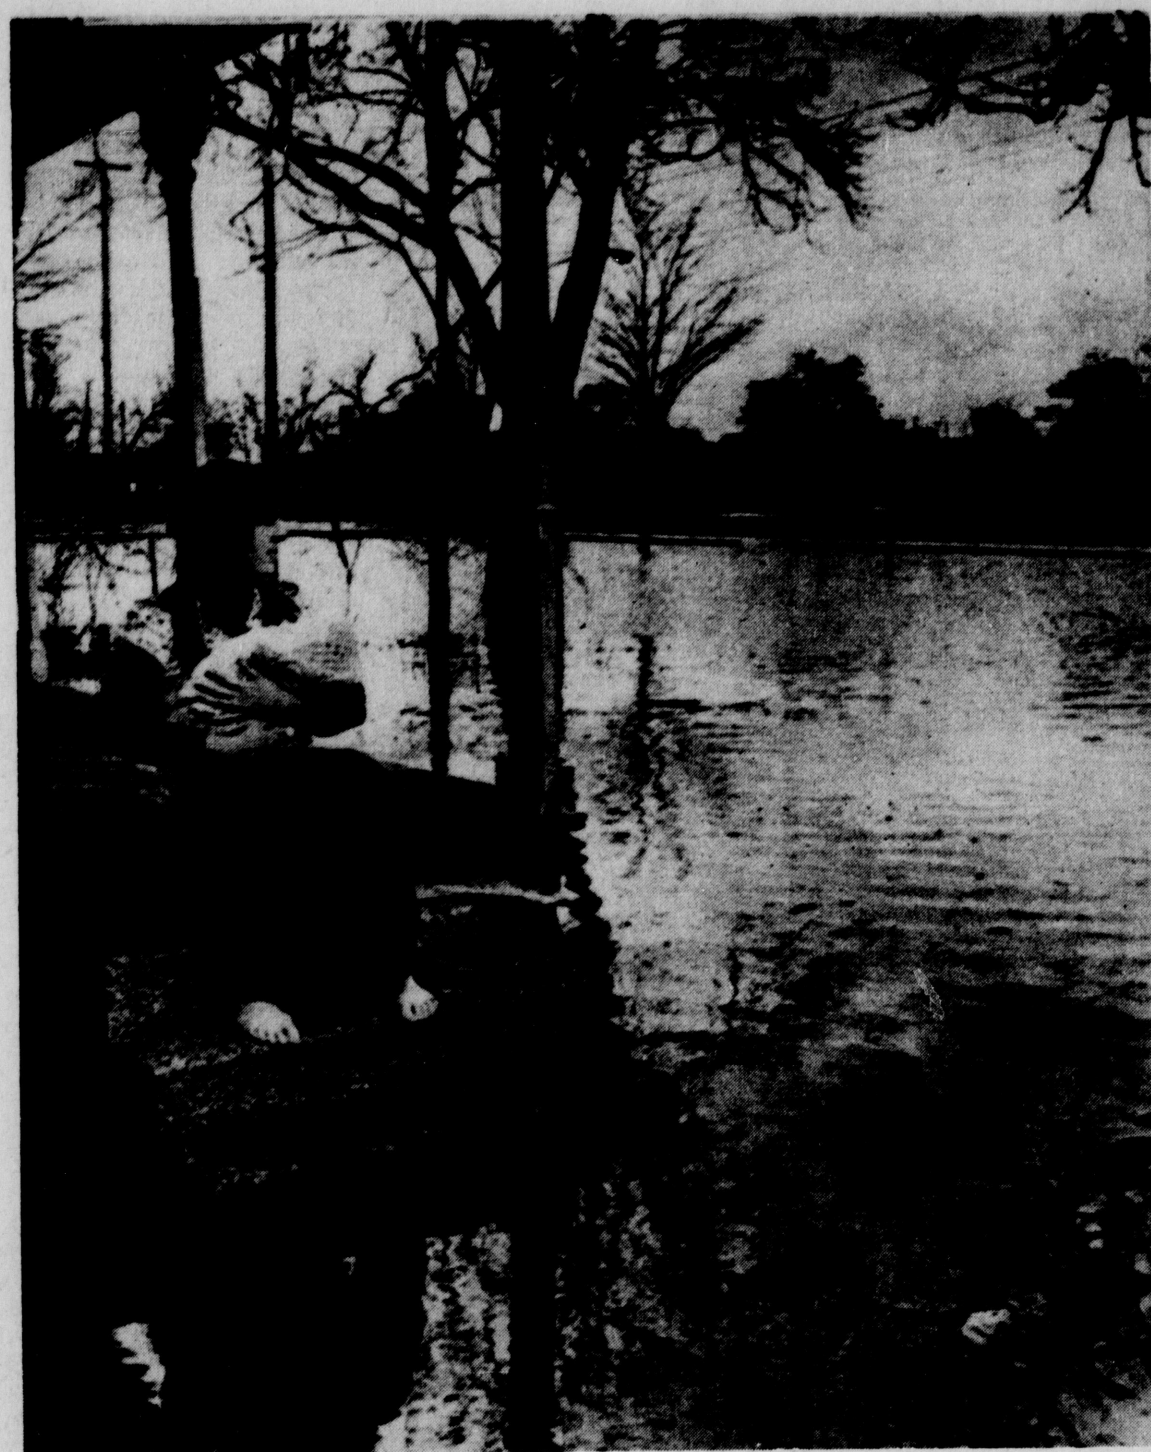

The USC statement said it would make available to scholars "substantially all the materials accumulated by former President Nixon during his years in public service."

USC said private funds would be solicited for the library since law prevents the use of public funds for such facilities.

In the Penthouse magazine article, reporter Tad Szulc said the device used to bug the Oval Office was a tiny laser beam transmitter called "Easy Chair." He said the device was so sophisticated it relayed even conversations made over scrambler telephones, permitted identification of every individual voice in the room, and could separate several simultaneous conversations.

The magazine said the recorded material was relayed to an undisclosed remote recording center.

The device was removed in August 1970 without ever having been detected by the Secret Service, Szulc wrote.

Art airlift arrives in America

DETROIT (AP) — In one of the biggest art airlifts in history 150 masterpieces by French painters arrived in the United States for exhibition at the Detroit Institute of Arts, the first official event of the city's Bicentennial celebration.

Many of the canvases are so huge — the largest, "Wounded Cuirassier," a painting by Theodore Gericault, measures approximately 118 inches by 144 inches — that a number of them had to be removed from their frames for transport.

They were flown to this country on six separate flights, as the $55-million insurance contract stipulated that only a certain number could be shipped at one time.

Each shipment, accompanied by a courier, was met at the Detroit Airport by an armed escort and whisked to the museum. Uncrating was supervised by members of the museum's conservation department and each painting was carefully examined to make sure it had withstood the trip without damage.

"The Age of Revolution" exhibition came direct from its initial showing at the Grand Palais of the Louvre and will return to France after a showing in New York's Metropolitan Museum from June 13 to Sept. 7.

The priceless art treasures, assembled from 96 public and private collections, were painted in the period 1774 to 1830, from the death of Louis XV to the fall of Charles X.

The great neoclassicist, Jacques-Louis David, is represented by nine canvases, among them the famous "Death of Socrates." The climax of the show is Eugene Delacroix's "Liberty."

The exhibition took more than five years to assemble and includes, in addition to works of such major artists as Corot, Fragonard, Gericault, Gros, Greuze and Ingres, lesser known portraits, landscapes and still lifes.

It was conceived by Dr.

Frederick J. Cummings, director of the Detroit Institute of Arts; Dr. Pierre Rosenberg, curator of paintings at the Louvre, and Dr. Robert Rosenblum of the Institute of Fine Arts, New York University.

The bulk of the loans are from French national museums; others are from Dublin, Brussels, Rotterdam, Florence and Ottawa, as well as from a number of American museums. Among the 93 artists represented are six women.

Among the paintings is a landscape by the man whose invention gave birth to a new art form, photography: Louis Jacques Mande Daguerre, inventor of the daguerreotype.

Private wells relieve energy woes

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dozens of rural residents in Missouri and Kansas, besieged by skyrocketing propane costs and doomsday talk of an energy crisis, are returning to the ways of the people who first settled this land.

They are becoming self-reliant.

At a cost ranging from $3,000 to $7,000, some families — if they are lucky — can drill a gas well, get it piped into their home and enjoy a clean, free, private source of energy for perhaps half a century. There is little or no maintenance expense and practically no government bureaucracy to contend with.

But riverboat gamblers have taken lesser risks. No one can guarantee that a well, even if gas is tapped, will be operable. Scattered throughout the Midwest are deep, expensive, very useless holes in the ground owned by farmers who gambled and lost.

Mike Mehmert, a geologist with Cullum and Brown, Inc., a Kansas City drilling company, says 90 per cent of the people inquiring into private residential wells are propane users.

"Their propane bill has doubled or tripled in the past year, and they're paying $100 or $120 a month to heat their home," he said. "At that point, drilling a private well begins to look more and more feasible."

Most states, with Kansas an exception, require land owners to post a bond before drilling a private gas well.

"The bond is to ensure that the well will be abandoned properly," said Jack Wells, an official of the Missouri Geological Survey. "We want to be sure that there won't be an open hole left in the ground when the gas supply runs out, we want to keep ground water from being contaminated."

Usually a $1,000 bond is required in Missouri; it can be obtained from an insurance company for about $10.

State officials in Missouri and Kansas say it's impossible to know how many private gas wells are in use in their states since no precise records are easily available.

"But we are getting more and more inquiries," Wells said, "especially in western Missouri."

Margaret Oros, an official with the Kansas Geological Survey, also noted a marked increase in private residential gas well drillings in the past year. "We're also getting numerous inquiries from country clubs, industrial concerns and the like," she said.

Mrs. Oros mentioned one drawback to owning your own gas well.

"Commercial gas companies add an odor to the gas so a leak can be recognized right away. A private well wouldn't have this, of course, so there could be a possible danger there.

"And just because someone in the past has found gas in the area doesn't mean you can't get a dry hole."

Buses get art rolling

BERLIN (AP) — "The first one certainly gave people a start. It looked like a giant zebra coming at you out of the fog."

Dr. Alfred Silber laughed.

"Now," he added, "our pop colored doubledecker buses here in Berlin no longer are unusual. And after early complaints that some windows had been painted over, we know of no adverse public reaction."

Began as a pilot project two years ago at the request of advertisers who wanted a whole bus as a rolling ad, the rain-bow-hued doubledeckers of West Berlin have become both a familiar and colorful sight on the city's streets.

Silber is sales director for the city-run Berlin Transportation Company — BVG. It handles both bus and subway traffic.

After an originally cautious reception by company executives, Silber said, the project now has wholehearted endorsement to the point where the BVG itself is thinking of taking out a whole bus ad on its own behalf.

External painting of entire surfaces has also expanded to subway trains, Silber added, although this is still in an experimental stage.

The BVG plans to make 80 of its 1,100 doubledecker buses available, with about 65 now actually having been totally painted according to the wishes of an advertiser.

The city's 500 one-decker buses and the rest of the doubledeckers are confined to traditional poster ads inside and out, with the buses themselves yellow with black lettering.

Silber said in an interview the cost of painting a whole doubledecker on the outside runs from 4,000 to 12,000 marks ($1,750 to $5,200) for an advertiser. In addition, each advertiser pays a monthly rental fee of 1,200 marks ($520).

Perhaps fittingly enough, the most expensive paint job ad so far features the heads normally seen on West German 50 and 100 mark bills.

Bus ads are but part of the transportation company's advertising program, which also includes silo-like street signs on almost every corner as well as huge billboards.

The first company to take a whole doubledecker ad was a downtown perfume shop that chose the black and white zebra motif.

Now there are ads for newspapers, airlines, dry cleaning establishments, liquor, furniture stores, boutiques, nightclubs and a wide variety of other enterprises.

Black and white cows playfully romping on a green field beneath a blue sky advertise milk.

A man and woman in a bathtub, separated by a bus door, promote soap.

Gunter Hecht, press spokesman for the transportation company, said common decency is one limit to what can be painted on a bus, along with consideration for traffic safety.

"We had to turn down one customer who wanted to wrap a whole bus in silver foil," Hecht said, "because of the glare that would have disturbed other drivers."

Silber declared the company is now also experimenting with stick-on poster strips in color that can be easily applied and removed and which will be a lot cheaper, although not covering a whole bus. He said the aim here is to capture one-shot advertising for such events as prize fights or other entertainment.

Unknown dictates fashion

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — For more than three decades Don Huxley has been dictating fashion for nearly 700,000 women and men in 84 different countries.

But, he admits, "I don't think the designers in the high fashion centers of Paris and New York ever heard of me."

Huxley's creations are worn by a different kind of "jet-setter" — the members of the far-flung U.S. Air Force.

Huxley, a dapper 58-year-old transplanted upstate New Yorker, was chief of the Air Force's clothing division at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base until his recent retirement.

For 34 years he has been designing every type of dress worn by the Air Force, including the first Air Force uniform in 1947.

"It was the first military uniform to follow the lines of a civilian business suit," he said. "And contrary to rumor, the particular shade of blue wasn't selected because the Air Force chief of staff thought it would look good with his shade of gray hair."

Huxley said only minor changes, mainly in fabrics, have been made in the uniform since then.

"We buy in such enormous quantities," he explained, "that drastic changes would cost an awful amount of money."

He said the chief problem in designing uniforms is creating something that will look good on humans of every imaginable size and shape.

"But you can't please everybody," he said. "If we've worked for, say, 14 million people over the years, 12½ million of them said they could do it better."

Huxley is the third generation of a family of garment designers and was managing his uncle's clothing plant at 19.

He became a clothing consultant for the old Army Air Corps in 1941 and two years later was tapped to head the newly established personal equipment laboratory at Wright-Patterson, then simply Wright Field.

He's been there ever since and his credits include the Air Force band uniforms and the uniform of every presidential flight crew since Truman's Independence.

"We also worked on altitude suits for the first astronauts, until that was turned over to NASA," he said.

Huxley, whose son is an Air Force captain and daughter an Air Force wife, plans to remain in Dayton.

Women students skeptical about equal employment

BOSTON (AP) — Women graduating from Harvard Business School this year say they expect to get good jobs but many are worried about discrimination despite the quotas of women and minorities that some companies indicate they seek.

"There is a myth going around that if you're a woman here you don't have any problems," said Judy Cronin, one of the 87 women students in the school's class of 802. "But when the offers are in and the money is on the table, I'll be surprised if the women do as well as the men."

She said she believes because of the recession companies can't afford to consider quotas.

"Everyone needs the most capable people these days," she said. "If the ones they hire happen to be from governmentally required groups, then they are even more delighted."

Despite the current recession, there doesn't appear to be any reduction in the number of recruiters from industry on campus.

But the women students are wary of being hired as part of a quota need rather than because they are qualified.

"They are often not very tactful," said Elyse Gansfried. "Some interviewers make it very obvious that they have quotas to fill."

Marsha Allen, a first year student who is black, is looking for summer work in marketing. "Often the companies come right out and say, 'We are looking for women and minorities, but your qualifications make you attractive even without those other factors,'" she said. "But it is really hard to tell they are being sincere. The only way to know is just to go to work for them and see."

The women students said they are very conscious of the possibility they might be hired by a company which has not come around to the idea of women executives yet.

"I don't want to enter a company where there is a chance that my career will be stifled because someone above me cannot deal with women managers," said Madeline Pfau. She said she has been looking for jobs in heavy industry in the Southwest.

Weapons seized in uprising

WASHINGTON (AP) — An assortment of hand-made weapons was seized by guards after a 17-hour inmate uprising in which a dozen persons were taken hostage and later released unharmed at the District of Columbia Jail.

Delbert C. Jackson, D.C. corrections director, said a shake-down of prisoner cells Sunday yielded several hand-fashioned metal and wooden clubs but no guns or knives.

Inmates complaining of conditions at the jail took control of a cellblock about 1 a.m. Saturday and seized 12 hostages, including 11 guards and a male nurse. One of the guards was freed about noon and the remainder were released Saturday evening after a negotiated end to the uprising.

Guards searching the cellblock after the settlement discovered the body of an inmate, Robert B. Seegars, 24, arrested recently on arson charges. The death was ruled a homicide by strangulation. Officials noted Seegars testified against several defendants charged in a similar uprising at the jail in October, 1972.

Priesters won a demand for establishment of a citizens committee to examine inmates' complaints and to make periodic visits to the jail "to see that there's no abuse," Jackson said. Also granted was a request for more frequent family visits.

Sturgis says

Indecision stopped plan to kill Castro

NEW YORK (AP) — Convicted Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis says indecision in Washington prevented his carrying out a plan to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro in 1959, the New York Daily reported in today's editions.

Sturgis told the News in an interview that he abandoned the plan, hatched while he was a CIA operative, because Washington never gave him the "green light."

Student reports

Laura Lea Gray, 2314 South Ingram, a junior in the college of education at the University of Missouri-Columbia, was among 60 students initiated into Pi Lambda Theta honor and professional society.

To be considered, upperclass undergraduate students must have a grade point average of 3.2 or better on a 4.0 scale, and graduate students must have an average of 3.5 or better.

President Martin Van Buren, small in stature but dexterous in his political maneuvers in New York and on the national scene, was nicknamed "The Little Magician."

"They couldn't make up their minds," the News quoted Sturgis as saying.

Sturgis, who served 15 months in prison after pleading guilty in the Watergate conspiracy, first went to Cuba in 1957 at the urging of Cuban exiles in Miami who supported Castro against Fulgencio Batista.

Sturgis worked as a gun-runner for Castro and, within a period of months, was recruited for intelligence work by Park F. Woolam, then in charge of the U.S. Consulate in Cuba, the News said.

After Castro rose to power, Sturgis became intelligence chief of the Cuban Air Force. He said Woolam told him to go to Havana and make contact with CIA agents at the American Embassy.

At the agent's direction, he said, "I recruited everyone I could, Americans and Cubans, to be undercover agents."

Sturgis said he sought approval for the assassination plot through the U.S. Embassy in Cuba. "Whether this (approval) would have to come from the top level in Washington or a lower level, I don't know," he said.

A friend of Sturgis, Max Gorman Gonzales, confirmed that the CIA asked Sturgis to participate in assassination plots in Cuba and elsewhere, according to the News. But Sturgis would comment only on the abortive plot in 1959.

The News reported that other intelligence sources said the CIA later approved and bankrolled other plots to wipe out Castro, with Mafia dons and others playing prominent parts in those conspiracies.

Egypt doesn't want help from U.S. in negotiations

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy says his government will not take part in any further Middle East peace bid by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and is ready for resumption of the Geneva conference in June, according to Egyptian news reports from Moscow.

Fahmy also said Egypt's only condition for the Geneva negotiations is that the Palestine Liberation Organization must be invited as an independent delegation.

This raised the prospect of an Israeli boycott, since the Israeli government refuses to negotiate with the Palestine guerrillas. There have been suggestions that Israel might accept them as part of a unified Arab delegation.

Fahmy met for four hours Sunday in Moscow with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. Afterward he told correspondents of Egypt's official Middle East News Agency and of the semi-official Cairo paper Al-Ahram:

"Egypt refuses to return to the step-by-step approach or any similar formulas and does not object to holding the Geneva peace talks either before or after the Arab summit conference."

Fahmy did not specify a date for the resumption of the Geneva talks, but the Arab summit is tentatively scheduled for late June.

He said the Soviet Union had agreed to invite the PLO to the talks. The Soviet Union and the United States are co-chairmen of the conference.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was flying to Saudi Arabia today for talks with King Khaled, President Hafez Assad of Syria and PLO leader Yasir Arafat on the new Geneva conference.

Khaled met Saturday in Riyadh with King Hussein of Jordan.

Diplomatic sources said Sadat was embarking on an intense diplomatic campaign to resolve Arab differences before the return to Geneva.

Meanwhile, King Hassan of Morocco, the current chairman of the Arab League, has cancelled an official visit to Washington that was to have begun Tuesday, according to official sources in Rabat. The sources said one reason for the cancellation was the collapse of Kissinger's attempt last month to negotiate a new Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai desert.

The U.S. Embassy in the Moroccan capital said the trip was "postponed" at Hassan's request. It added that the Moroccans assured the United States that the action did not reflect any deterioration in the traditionally friendly relations between the two countries.

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said his government is considering a long-term arrangement to sell oil to the United States in exchange for help in the industrialization of Saudi Arabia.

Interviewed Sunday on the CBS program "Face the Nation," Yamani said Saudi Arabia "accepts the principle of Israel," but Israel must give up all territory occupied in the 1967 war, including East Jerusalem. He added that if the Israelis withdraw from East Jerusalem, he believes an agreement can be worked out to give all religions the freedom of the city.

Trip sparks speculation on U.S. role in Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A highly successful shopping trip to Paris by Premier Constantine Caramanlis has heightened the expectation that France will replace the waning American influence in Greece.

The premier, who spent 7½ years in self-imposed exile in Paris, returned from the French capital on Sunday with pledges of $80 million in loans and new French weapons for the Greek armed forces.

Reports from Paris said the French government "agreed to almost everything" Caramanlis requested. The Greek press said the premier's mission was "more successful than his wildest dreams."

The reports from Paris said the French agreed to speed up the arms deliveries in view of continuing Greek-Turkish tensions. The arms will be financed by low-interest, long-term loans; French banks pledged $80 million for Greece's five-year agricultural development plan, and another $400 million is to come from European banking sources with French government support.

Diplomatic observers said the trip was an indication that U.S. influence is "just about finished" in Greece.

The Greeks blame Washington because it did not prevent the Turkish conquest of northern Cyprus last summer. At the height of the crisis Caramanlis withdrew Greek forces from the unified command of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, a step that was obviously patterned on President Charles de Gaulle's withdrawal of French forces from the NATO command.

Talks are under way to determine the future of seven

U.S. military bases in Greece. The prospect for their future has not been made any brighter by the resentment of many Greeks because of the American government's support of the military dictatorship that ruled them for most of the past decade.

On Cyprus, barbed wire barricades and United Nations troops turned back more than 20,000 Greek Cypriot women who marched to the demarcation lines between Greek and Turkish Cyprus Sunday and demanded permission to return to their homes in the Turkish part of the island.

Demonstrations in support of the Greek Cypriot women were held in Athens, London and Ottawa. In Athens, 10,000 turned out. In London, 3,000 marched to the prime minister's residence at No. 10 Downing Street. In Ottawa, there were 75 demonstrators.

Best actress . . . again

Comedian Milton Berle, left, congratulates Ellen Burstyn Sunday night after Miss Burstyn was presented with a Broadway Tony award as best actress for her role in "Same Time Next Year." Earlier this month, Miss Burstyn won an Oscar as best actress for her role in "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore."

Ford picture not true

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Producers and customers under the American system "are not enemies, but partners," President Ford said in a speech at Concord, N.H., but the statement really applied to an ideal rather than a reality.

It is true that you can't have consumers without producers, and that most people are both producers and consumers, but somehow the lines have been drawn that separate people emotionally into one or the other category.

Each feels the other enjoys unfair advantages that should be restrained. Each attacks the other while remaining conscious of the fact that they cannot exist except in relation to each other.

Complicating rather than clarifying the relationship is the role played by government. Each category calls upon government to be its ally. Each tries to state its case through rigid legislation.

Maybe this is considered competition, but the end result isn't competition but the reduction of it. There is widespread agreement today that much marketplace legislation is counterproductive.

Various agencies and laws maintain prices higher than they might be with free competition — the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Aviation Administration, public utility commissions, fair trade laws.

The latter, which prevail in 36 states, permit manufacturers to set the retail price of their product and, in some instances, permit them to refuse goods to outlets that try to cut prices.

All in all, the President said, government regulation costs every American $2,000 a year, a figure whose origins he didn't reveal. The precise figure might be disputed, but not the fact. It has been amply demonstrated that much regulation is wasteful.

But it isn't only consumers and academicians and government officials who seem to have lost sight of the mutual dependency of producers and consumers. In their zealous efforts to sell, some producers overemphasized consumption.

It is only recently that industry has made any important effort in its advertising to stress the importance of production. Almost every ad was a plea to consume more — toothpaste, cereal, autos, travel, cosmetics.

The realization that the massive production of the United States was, in the process, damaging the environment of consumers has further sharpened the line.

Something had to be done to reduce pollution and ecological destruction. Few people will disagree. But some critical observers now believe the country might have hamstrung production by too much heavy-handed regulations.

Some regulations to protect the environment have, for example, led to layoffs. Regulations to make automobiles safer have led to higher car prices. And attempts at legislating the good life for consumers has led to higher taxes.

Can there be more proof, as the President attempted to point out, that what affects one group affects the other — that producers and consumers are one and the same?

Corps to lease land in Truman Reservoir area

The Army Corps of Engineers will lease approximately 600 acres of land for grazing at the Harry S. Truman Dam and Reservoir for a six month period.

The land is located in Henry County around Calhoun and Deepwater, and is part of land leased by the Corps to the Missouri Conservation Commission for fish and wildlife management. The area includes 14 parcels of 20 to 150 acres to be leased from now until Oct. 15.

Seventy-five per cent of the rent will be returned to Henry County, according to the Corps of Engineers.

Information on the land will be given at the Corps' real estate office in Clinton, 816-885-8123.

Bids to lease the land should be submitted to the Corps' Clinton office by April 28.

Flood control probe sought

By The Associated Press
Backwater that flooded hundreds of thousands of acres in the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta continued to drain through flood gates today and officials said they planned to seek an investigation of flood control in the area.

In Michigan, meanwhile, the rain-swollen Red Cedar and Grand rivers which flooded over the weekend buffeted the capital city of Lansing. The flooding forced 800 families to evacuate their homes and caused an estimated $50 million damage.

Gov. William G. Milliken asked President Ford to declare 14 storm-wrecked counties federal disaster areas.

Rep. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said he would seek a congressional investigation of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers flood control program for the lower Mississippi Valley.

Cochran said he also wanted to talk with corps officials about the Steele Bayou flood gates and their regulation of backwater from the Yazoo River.

Several hundred thousand acres, including crop lands, are flooded and an estimated 800 persons have had to evacuate their homes in the delta.

Flooding occurred along the Yazoo and the Red and Black rivers in Louisiana because tributaries have been unable to drain into the swollen Mississippi. Army engineers have estimated flood damage in Louisiana will exceed $50 million.

The engineers said the backwater would drain slowly into the Yazoo, which has fallen 0.3 feet below the backwater.

Two young Lansing men drowned in the Grand River after they headed out in a small vinyl raft and were sucked under the flooding current. No other injuries were reported.

Some 471 National Guardsmen were dispatched to help people in the Lansing and Lapeer areas evacuate water-filled homes.

Thieu's resignation clears way to peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The resignation of President Nguyen Van Thieu removes the one publicly stated obstacle to a negotiated peace in South Vietnam, but some U.S. officials think it may have come too late.

Viet Cong and North Vietnamese leaders have said they would never negotiate with Thieu, calling him a bandit and a murderer.

However, some U.S. experts say that fighting in South Vietnam so favors the Communists it is doubtful they would be willing to negotiate even with Thieu gone.

"It sounds like a cliché," one State Department official said. "But Saigon is just hanging there, ripe for the picking. I can't see why they would wait and let the fruit fall when they can just reach for it now."

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger headed for the White House for an early meeting with President Ford to discuss the implications of Thieu's resignation.

While U.S. officials declined immediate public comment, one told a newsman, "Things will happen now." He declined to be specific, but appeared to refer to at least some brightening of prospects for a negotiated settlement.

Initial congressional reaction anticipated the possibility of a negotiated settlement but no increase in the prospect of any massive new military aid for the Saigon government.

One possible step toward a negotiated settlement would be to attempt to establish a coalition government among the North Vietnamese, the Viet Cong and remaining elements of the Thieu government.

LaMonte named Bicentennial community

LaMonte has been designated an official American Revolution Bicentennial community.

The western Pettis County community was one of 27 communities in Missouri to be honored in April by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Missouri now has a total of 168 cities involved in the 200th birthday celebration of the country.

The official Bicentennial flag and a certificate of recognition will be presented at a later date.

To achieve recognition the communities submitted proposals centered around the three themes of Heritage '76, Festival USA and Horizons '76.

Communities are notified of their selection on the 15th of each month.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Bone growth was problem

Dear Dr. Lamb — I would like some information please. Last spring my brother, age 17, began having blinding headaches and occasional dizzy spells. As the summer wore on his headaches grew worse. He fainted several times, and he lost so much muscle control that he stumbled constantly.

At times he could hardly hold his head up. His family doctor sent him to a neurosurgeon who promptly operated. The neurosurgeon removed a piece of skull bone that was pressing into my brother's spinal cord. As I understand it, the doctor said the bone was growing into his spinal cord.

I would like to know what causes this condition. How is it treated and what after effects are there, if any? My brother's health is good now. Would this condition relate to my brother being a twin?

Dear Reader — Your brother is very fortunate to have his problem correctly diagnosed and treated with no apparent damage.

The spinal cord joins the brain just as it enters the large hole in the base of the skull, the point where the vertebral column joins the skull. At this area there are many nerve tracts, like huge bundles of electrical wires, that carry the signals to and from the brain to the entire body below the head.

A bony spur rarely grows out of the skull opening and may create pressure on the spinal cord. Similarly, bone growth in the cervical spine can narrow the channel where the cord is located and cause pressure on the spinal cord.

Whenever the pressure creates symptoms, the usual and best approach is to relieve the pressure by surgery. It is a plain mechanical problem, relieved by a direct mechanical approach. If permanent nerve damage hasn't occurred before it is corrected, the patient should return to his normal state rather quickly.

Mechanical pressure in that area of the cord can affect the nerve fibers that control the opening and closing of the small arteries, the blood pressure, muscular action and almost all bodily functions. No wonder your brother had trouble.

What causes it? That is hard to say. The basis for it may have been present from birth, and, with bone growth as he grew, the condition progressed until it caused problems.

In adults, particularly after age 40, degeneration of the bones and such things as cervical arthritis lead to bony spur formations that sometimes cause pressure on the cord or nerve roots.

One of the astronauts had a narrowing of the opening in the spinal column from an overgrowth of bone in that area. He subsequently had surgery for it and apparently has had no trouble with it since. He is a well-known public figure. We debated at some length about the question of whether the opening was so small that we should not recommend him for the program. He passed and fulfilled his mission in space.

And, I don't think that the fact that your brother is a twin has anything to do with the condition.
